Lend-Lease Got Uranium For Russia During War

New Deal Cabinet Member Involved In Negotiations; Army, Navy Advised

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Uranium — basic material for atomic bombs — was shipped to Russia during the war under Lend-Lease after negotiations involving a former New Deal Cabinet officer, a House Un-American Activities Committee source said yesterday.

Sources within the House Committee on Un-American Activities confirmed the fact that export licenses for the uranium metal and uranium compounds were granted under Lend-Lease.

The committee has called former Army intelligence officers to testify concerning this whole matter during its current inquiry into the alleged Washington spy ring.

Amount Called "Significant"

Russia received a "significant" amount of uranium metal from this country as late as 1945, Representative John I owell (R., Pa.), a member of the committee, told the House yesterday.

This followed a shipment of 2720 pounds of uranium compound in 1943 when Russia was asking for the rare material by the ton, McDowell said. Both shipments were made at a time when Russia was a military ally of this Nation.

The uranium deal was made, according to committee sources, by the Cabinet officer, a French uranium mine owner and a Russian agent.

The mine owner, committee sources said, was born in Russia, left there as a child, became a Belgian citizen and is now in Paris. He is not a Communist, the committee sources said.

Company Confirmation

From Denver, Colo., the Associated Press last night reported that a representative of the S. W. Shattuck Co. there said the Army and the Navy were both advised it was shipping uranium nitrate and uranium oxide to Russia five years ago and made no effort to stop it.

Other developments in the fast-breaking story of Soviet influence in wartime Washington were:

Communists' Platform Like Progressives'

12 Indicted Leaders Reelected to Party's National Committee

New York, Aug. 6 (NYHT).—The Communist National Convention adopted as its campaign platform today a shorter and more hard-hitting version of Henry A. Wallace's Progressive Party platform, with additional material distinguishing between the Communist idea of "socialism" and Wallace's "progressive capitalism."

At its closing session the convention also reelected to the national committee the 12 party leaders who were indicted on charges of advocating the violent overthrow of the Government. Elizabeth Gurley Flynn was elected as the committee's sole woman member. The committee reelected William Z. Foster national chairman, and Eugene Dennis general secretary.

The platform stated that the Communist Party will support all Progressive Party candidates, and enter its own candidates only in districts where no Progressives are running.

Platform States Demands

Like the Progressive platform, the 3000-word Communist platform stated "demands" where the major parties offer promises. The principal Communist-Progressive demands are as follows:

"End the 'cold war,' the draft and the huge military budget!" (This, from the Communist platform, sums up five paragrahs of the Progressive document, and is typical of the difference in style.)

Strengthen the United Nations, negotiate a German settlement with the Soviet Union, withdraw

Ewing Plans To Continue Use of Cook

FSA Chief Defends Draft of Hospital Chef for Luncheons

Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing said yesterday he knows a good man when he sees one—whether he be cook or commissioner.

Ewing, who has been under Congressional fire on several counts, told a press confergnce he wants to keep the cook but was glad to get rid of the commissioner.

The cook is Neaser James Kelly, head chef at St. Elizabeths Hospital, who was drafted by Ewing to prepare luncheons for himself and guests in his office dining room in the Federal Security Building, 4th st. and Independence ave. sw.

Blasts Former Boss

The Commissioner is John W. Studebaker, who, after resigning as Commissioner of Education, publicly blasted his former boss and assailed his administration.

Ewing told reporters yesterday that Studebaker used such poor judgment he had planned to fire him, but that Studebaker "beat me to the gun" by resigning.

He flatly denied Studebaker's charges accusing Ewing of poor administration and of suppressing Office of Education attacks against communism.

Ewing acknowledged that he had used Kelly to prepare meals at the FSA, but said the Budget Bureau had assured him the procedure was proper.

To Continue Use

"I intend to continue using him," added Ewing.

As for Studebaker, Ewing at the conference took up a letter by the former, released last Sunday to newspapers, accusing the FSA chief of interfering with the Office of Education program for promoting democracy in schools.

Ewing declared this was all "pure poppycock and irrelevant and irresponsible innuendo." He said it doesn't require a sensitive nose to detect "an aroma of politics and pique."

"To infer that I am lukewarm in my opposition to communism is pure unadulterated falsehood," said Ewing. "The man who made that innuendo knows it and deliberately made it."

Studebaker had charged that one of his staff member's speeches criticizing communism had been censored. In his reply yesterday, Ewing said Studebaker had failed to mention that another part of the speech had been deleted because it called Congressmen "miserable objects" and worse.

"Where would we be if a thing like that got out?" he asked.

Ewing said he had planned to discharge Studebaker because he was absent from his post so often on personal business. He said Studebaker was in San Diego and

Bob Mathias, 17, Wins in Olympic Decathlon Event

London, Aug. 6 (U.P.).—Bob Mathias, a 17-year-old schoolboy from Tulare, Calif., wrote an almost unbelievable page in Olympic history today when he defied a driving rain for 12 hours and won the decathlon, most gruelling event of the games.

In the supreme test of all-around track and field ability, the husky young giant from the United States outran, outjumped and outthrew 29 full-grown men—perhaps the most brilliant field ever assembled for the event.

Mathias finished his performance with a total of 7139 points for the entire 10 events. In second place came I. Henrich of France with 6974 and Floyd M. Simmons of Los Angeles was third with 6954.

The decathlon began and ended today in a discouraging downpour. When Mathias trotted across the finish line in the day's final event, the 1500-meter run, only a few thousand of the 62,000 fans who jammed Wembley Stadium early in the day were still on hand.

Overturned Canoe Leads to Dragging In Potomac River

An overturned canoe, a mile downstream from Chain Bridge, led Harbor Police yesterday to drag the Potomac River for a possible drowning victim.

The canoe was rented from Fletcher Boat House, police said, by a 19-year-old Ecuadorian youth, Ramiro Castello, 1314 16th st. nw.

A sports jacket found on rocks near the Virginia shore near the overturned canoe was identified as belonging to Castello by Guillermo Suro, 2480 16th st. nw.

Suro, chief of the State Department's division of languages, said Castello, a cousin of Mrs. Suro, had come to the United States last year to attend Charlotte Hall Academy, but had been attending the Columbia School of Commercial Art at 1239 Vermont ave. nw. this summer.

Kefauver Hears Rumor

Crump Machine Badly Beaten, May Give Support to Reece

Chattanooga Man Confident of Victory In Senate Contest

Browning Also Wins To Complete Defeat Of Memphis Boss

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

A rumor was afloat here and in Tennessee yesterday that Ed Crump, boss of a badly damaged Democratic machine in Memphis, might help Carroll Reece win a seat in the United States Senate next November.

There was no concrete evidence to support the rumor.

Reece, formerly chairman of the Republican National Committee, won the GOP senatorial nomination in Tennessee's primary election Thursday.

Representative Estes Kefauver, of Chattanooga, who has been in the House 10 years, won the Democratic senatorial nomination. He won it over the bitter opposition of Boss Crump, who called him a "Red" and spent a reported $150,000 to stop him.

Kefauver, in a telephone interview with The Washington Post from Nashville last night, said that he had heard the rumor about Crump and Reece.

"It's talked about a good deal," he said, "but I haven't any evidence that it's true. Mr. Crump hasn't said anything."

Kefauver went on to add that he would win the Senate seat in November even if Crump did support Reece.

"I'm not only going to win," he said, "I'm going to win by a large margin. There is no doubt about it."

He pointed out that he had a

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 6 (AP).—The E. H. Crump Democratic regime of Memphis, one of the last potent dynasties on the American political scene, went down to stunning defeat today in a ballot landslide loosed in Thursday's violence-punctuated primary.

Crump's choice for Governor, incumbent Jim McCord, seeking a third two-year term, carried only the Tenth (Shelby County-Memphis) district and the First District in Republican East Tennessee.

Crump's senatorial candidate, John A. Mitchell, carried only his home district, the Fourth in middle Tennessee, and the Tenth. The State has 10 districts.

Victors in the senatorial and gubernatorial contests were Estes Kefauver, veteran of 10 years in the lower house of Congress, and Gordon Browning.

The unofficial count in 2024 precincts of the State's approximately 2300:

Kefauver, 152,489.
Mitchell, 78,596.
Stewart, 117,787.

In the Governor's race the count from 2024 precints stood:

Browning, 214,465.
McCord, 160,142.

Kefauver was nominated to the Senate seat now held by Tom Stewart, who sought reelection. Browning was nominated for the Governor's seat he won for one term in 1937.

National Guard at Benton

2 Dead, 5 Hurt in Tennessee Voting as Tension Runs High

Benton, Tenn., Aug. 6 (AP).—National Guardsmen with bayonets rolled into this gun-bristling Southeastern Tennessee County seat today to quell continuing election strife which has left two reported dead and five wounded.

The troopers came at the direction of Governor Jim McCord as tension ran high in a county general election dispute which flared up yesterday.

They were preceded a few minutes by a second ambush shooting within 24 hours. The first ended in the death of one man and the wounding of another. In subsequent gunplay another man was slain and four persons wounded.

Today's ambush attack was directed at a heavily-armed motorcade bringing a disputed election box from nearby Copperhill to Benton. The driver of a car at which a single shot was fired was cut by glass fragments.

As the guardsmen entered the city, the Polk County Good Government League claimed a sweeping victory over former Sheriff Burch E. Biggs' Democratic organization. Biggs has been in power here for 18 years.

H. E. Barclay, Copperhill chairman of the GGL, proclaimed victory after leading the motorcade here with the clinching ballots cast in the county general election. He said the GGL, which entered a full slate against the Biggs candidates, won all but three races. The latter went to opposition justice of peace aspirants.

Adjt. Gen. Hilton Butler was en route from Nashville to take charge of the guardsmen. Lynn Bomar, State safety commissioner, also was en route with 30 highway patrolmen.

Members of the opposing factions which had been openly carrying guns put them away when the word spread that the guard had arrived. The first detail included 85 officers and men.

Yesterday's blood-letting followed weeks of squabbling between spokesmen for the long-entrenched Democratic political organization of former Sheriff Biggs and the nonpartisan Good Govern-

Called 'Serious Accusation'

Judge Raedy Mum as West Asks Proofs of 'Favoritism'

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West asked Judge Ellen K. Raedy yesterday to prove her charges that Municipal Court prosecutors were refusing to prosecute friends accused of driving while drunk.

Judge Raedy had no comment to make. Reporters visited her chambers twice and telephoned her office a dozen times between 10:30 a. m. and 4 p. m., but her secretary said "the judge is busy" each time.

Judge Raedy sat in chambers and did not take the bench yesterday.

West's letter was provoked by remarks Judge Raedy made Thursday in a bench conference with Assistant Corporation Counsel Philip Brophy. She said:

"Your position is that you nolle for your friends and not for others. I know what you are doing."

West's reaction to the charge was the following letter:

"Dear Judge Raedy:

"According to the newspapers, you, yesterday, in open court, stated that my assistants at the Municipal Court were nolle prossing the cases of friends charged with driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. If you were correctly reported, you have made a serious accusation which it is not only my duty but my desire to investigate. I will appreciate your furnishing me with the names of the cases you had in mind when you made the charge, and any proof you may have that the action taken by my assistants in any of the cases was influenced by friendship for the person involved.

"Yours very sincerely,
"VERNON E. WEST."

When Judge Raedy refused to see reporters seeking an explanation of her stand, her superior in the court, Chief Judge George P. Barse, was asked for his views. He replied:

"I have no jurisdiction over the case in any way. It is up to Judge Raedy, if she wishes, to explain or settle the matter. I have no say in it."

Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark F. King, in charge of driving-while-drunk prosecutions, said his office will continue its present policy of handling the cases, notwithstanding the Raedy comment.

He said authorities hold a person is not considered under the influence of alcohol unless his urine shows an alcoholic content of at least .15 per cent. Therefore, said King, his office will not prosecute unless such a concentration is shown.

The corporation counsel's office prepared the leaving-after-colliding case last September in which Judge Raedy herself was the defendant. She pleaded innocent and then forfeited $200 col-

Envoys Plan Another Call On Molotov

Diplomats Emerge With Smiles, No Comment From Long Parley Yesterday

By Eddie Gilmore

Moscow, Aug 6 (AP).—United States, British and French envoys will hold more meetings with Russian officials before any final agreements materialize as a result of the current four-power talks, it was learned tonight.

A highly informed source said there may be another conference with the Russians Saturday, but this is unlikely. A meeting Sunday seems more probable, the source said.

Today's conference with Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov was described as "very thorough." It lasted three hours. Prime Minister Stalin was not present.

At this meeting United States Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith, French Ambassador Yves Chataigneau, and Frank Roberts, special British envoy, visited the Kremlin for another try at solving east-west differences.

Come Out Smiling

Although the going may seem slow it was learned on excellent authority that there is no need for pessimism. It was learned that the western power negotiations with Molotov are proceeding smoothly.

The western envoys' conference with the Soviet Foreign Minister today lasted an hour longer than their meeting last Monday with Stalin. They emerged from it smiling but noncommittal.

"We met with Molotov. No comment," Smith told newspapermen. (The United Press said Andrei Smirnov, Molotov's chief adviser on Germany, was present.)

Obviously in a hurry to confer with his colleagues, Smith shifted his bulging brief case from hand to hand.

Roberts, right behind Smith, replied to correspondents:

"You heard what he said, didn't you? No comment."

Chataigneau was all smiles and said nothing.

Confer at U. S. Embassy

All three went directly to the American Embassy where they compared notes and ideas.

(London dispatches said diplomatic circles there believed the three western powers had submitted specific questions which they believed should be discussed at a new four-power conference on Berlin, Germany and perhaps Europe.

(The dispatches said an announcement may be made this weekend of the time, place and scope of a new meeting of the Foreign Ministers' Council. State Department spokesmen in Washington said no agreement on such a meeting has yet been reached.

(A meeting of Secretary of State Marshall, Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov, British Foreign Secretary Bevin and French Foreign Minister Schuman might be preceded by a get-together of their deputies to lay the groundwork.)

A battery of code clerks was standing by at the American Embassy along with the secretarial staff. Clerks and secretaries also were standing by at the British and French embassies.

Law Change Out

Capitol Hill Hands Dewey 'No' on DPs

By The Associated Press

Thomas E. Dewey, Republican presidential nominee, got his first "No" from Capitol Hill yesterday when a Senate subcommittee turned down his request to liberalize the displaced persons law at this special session.

Senator Revercomb (R., W. Va.) said Dewey asked revision of the law which has been criticized by a number of Republicans and Democrats on the ground that it discriminates against many Jews and Catholics. Gov. Dewey tonight had no comment.

Revercomb, chairman of the Judiciary Subcommittee, said "I emphatically deny" that the bill is discriminatory. Revercomb added that the issue cannot be "dealt with in haste or under pressure" and should be explored at hearings at the regular congressional session next year.

Law Under Criticism

The D. P. law, passed at the last session, says 205,000 European war refugees shall be admitted to the United States in the next two years.

Critics of the law, including President Truman, have centered their fire on a section which says the refugees must have entered displaced persons camps or occupied zones before December 27, 1945. The critics say thousands of Jews and many Catholics could not enter the camps until after the end of 1945.

An amendment was offered to change the date to April 21, 1947.

But the Senate subcommittee turned down the request yesterday by a 2-2 tie vote, after two days

Russia Hints At Grounding Allied Planes

U. S., British Ships Said to Have Broken Flight Rules at Berlin

Berlin, Aug. 6 (AP).—The official Soviet news agency charged tonight that British and American airplanes violated flight regulations 62 times in five days and hinted that planes committing violations can be forced to land.

This was the first time the Russians have mentioned the possibility of forcing planes down. The official Russian agency ANB said there are specific regulations for forcing down planes which fly over unauthorized areas.

The agency said the 62 violations occurred between July 31 and August 4, and consisted of low-level flights over Soviet airports and towns.

French Families Evacuated

Supply difficulties caused by the Russian blockade of Berlin prompted French authorities to announce today they were evacuating "as many French families as possible" from the city.

An official statement denied reports that French occupation troops or military government officials also were being withdrawn. The statement said:

"No member of the French garrison has left his post. The strength of the garrison remains the same as it was a year ago."

The statement was issued in reply to Russian reports which claimed 90 per cent of French military government officers had left Berlin.

DP Legislation, Wheat Marketing Pact Sidetracked In Committee

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Congress drifted toward a weekend adjournment last night after sidetracking three more Truman points—public housing, nondiscriminatory admission of displaced persons and the international wheat agreement.

Two restricted programs of its own, curbing bank and consumer credit and stimulating private construction of more low-cost homes, coasted toward final approval after the Senate:

1. By a 48-to-36 roll-call vote bowed to the House leadership's refusal to accept public housing and substituted a private housing bill for the Taft-Ellender-Wagner long-range program.

2. Called up the House-passed GOP anti-inflation bill, restoring wartime controls on time payments and restricting bank credit, and agreed to vote on a committee-modified version of it at 4 p. m. today.

House Takes Its Time

The House, geared to leave Washington tonight, if it doesn't have to strain to do it, simply waited around for the Senate to get through with what's left of the President's 11-point program.

When the housing bill came over, the House recessed overnight and arranged to vote today at its ease. Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.) predicted the Senate's limited home building aids will pass the house "as is."

That left only the GOP credit curb measure as a possible obstacle to adjournment and the Senate apparently removed doubts about that when it agreed to vote at a fixed hour.

House leaders made it plain to reporters that only if this inflation control measure, already passed by the House, is drastically changed will they even demand a conference with the Senate.

Truman Wins One Point

Thus, House concurrence in Senate action would signal the end of the special session just 13 days after it met at the President's call. Mr. Truman estimated it would take 15 days to enact his entire 11 points. Congress gave him just one point as he liked it—the 65-million-dollar U. N. loan.

Two others, on their way to the White House today, are a far cry from the sweeping price control and housing measures he called Congress back to enact.

A rebellious Senate Banking Committee, kicking over Republican leadership traces for the second time in two days, made an effort to do something about both. But the Senate with ease broke the housing revolt by rejecting its own thrice-passed long-range housing bill. The antiinflation rebellion hardly got to first base in the Banking Committee itself.

The committee's leading rebel, Chairman Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) offered price-wage control amendments modeled closely after the President's own. His amendments failed, 6 to 4, when only three Democrats voted with Tobey.

Tobey's banking group refused

B-29 Flies 5120 Miles, Germany to Kansas

Junction City, Kans., Aug 6 (AP). An Air Force B-29 landed at Marshall Field near Fort Riley today, completing a nonstop flight of 5120 miles from Furstenfeldbruck, Germany.

The plane, en route to the Smoky Hill Air Force Base at Salina, Kans., landed 23 hours and 55 minutes after taking off.

The B-29, carrying 19 passengers, came down because of a shortage of fuel only 40 miles short of its goal. Capt. Walter L. Abbott was first pilot, and Capt. Holly W. Bartlett and Lieut. John P. Gaffney were relief pilots.

The Superfortress was one of three which took off from Germany. One set down at Selfridge Field, Mich., and the other at Minneapolis.

Assembly Battle Looms

New French Premier Seeks Powers to Fight Insolvency

Paris, Aug. 6 (AP).—Andre Marie's new government today sought emergency powers from the National Assembly to cope with France's financial problems.

Coupled with an economic reform bill presented to the finance committee of the Assembly was the admission that to all practical effect France is broke.

The measure is politically explosive and the chances are that Premier Marie may be forced to demand a vote of confidence in his 10-day-old government before Assembly debate is completed.

The bill proposed in general terms:

1. Reductions in France's sprawling bureaucracy, civil and military.

2. Tax reform, including possible increases in business levies.

3. Reorganization of many nationalized and semi-nationalized agencies and industries, such as the railroads, banks, automobile and airplane factories.

4. Authority for the government to order its reforms by decree without specific legislative action.

The fourth point was expected to touch off a furious debate. Already the Communist press has had that point under fire.

The bill carefully avoided being specific as to what reforms the government intends to carry out. It was largely formulated by Finance Minister Paul Reynaud.

Under the bill the cabinet would have sweeping control over "the use of energy and distribution of raw materials" and the fixing of prices.

Legion Head Urges Relentless Communist Probe by Congress

James F. O'Neil, national commander of the American Legion, last night called on Congress to continue investigation of Communist activities in the Government "without fear or favor."

Addressing the 30th annual District of Columbia Legion convention at the Hotel Statler, O'Neil said "it is gratifying" to see Congressional committees take up the inquiry "in the absence of announced or unannounced concerted action by the Government."

O'Neil said, "It is true that a Federal grand jury has indicted 12 key Communists for plotting the overthrow of the Government by force. While this move is significant as the first official charge . . . it does not in itself guarantee conclusive action.

"Too often in the past Communist big-wigs have been hauled on the carpet with appropriate pomp and ceremony only to be quietly dismissed later."

The current investigations, he said, "must be touching sensitive and delicate spots, for already there is a concentrated effort to discredit the hearings.

"I ask you to beware of the slanders against the committees conducting the hearings. All too often, they smack of Communist origin."

O'Neil said that "while Congress has been courageous in probing communism, it has not been positive" about housing. He called for passage of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill, incorporating the Legion-backed Veterans Homestead

Big, Crump-Busting Estes Kefauver Aptly Called 'Old Ironsides' in College

Congressman Estes Kefauver, a big fellow from Chattanooga, was called "Old Ironsides" when he played tackle for the University of Tennessee back in the 1920s. This, they say, was because nobody seemed to be able to hurt him.

REP. ESTES KEFAUVER

The same immunity, apparently, carries over into the even more ruthless game of politics.

Kefauver was opposed for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, by red-headed Ed Crump, boss of the powerful Memphis political machine. In 20 years, no candidate in Tennessee had ever been able to defy Boss Crump and get away with it.

When the votes were counted this time, however, "Old Ironsides" was the triumphant nominee and the once invincible "Red Snapper" appeared to be washed up as State boss.

Kefauver, now 45, was first elected to the House of Representatives 10 years ago. He has been coming back to Capitol Hill regularly ever since. One reason for this is that he has always planned his campaigns very carefully, and another is that his attractive, Scottish-born wife, Nancy, has always been in there helping him.

Here is the way they would work: Driving down a road, they would stop at the edge of a town and study a map of the place. This would tell Kefauver the location of the furniture store, the hardware store and all the other points of interest. As a result, once inside the town, he would be thoroughly at home.

Despite all the careful planning, however, things sometimes went wrong.

On one occasion (Kefauver tells this one himself) a young fellow came up, extended his hand, and said, "How do you do, Mr. Kefauver."

The Congressman greeted the young fellow, asked his name, and inquired about his father.

"My father's dead," the youth replied.

Later that same day, Kefauver met the youngster in another part of town. He greeted him for the second time, but apparently did not place him.

"How's your father?" he inquired.

"He's still dead," came the answer.

Kefauver himself figured in a case of mistaken identity when he got married. His bride-to-be was Nancy Patterson Pigott, of Glasgow, Scotland, an attractive redhead whose father designed the ocean liner Queen Elizabeth. Kefauver met her when she was visiting relatives in Tennessee, and then, after a courtship, arranged to marry her in Glasgow.

Kefauver took along his best man when he went to Scotland. As they came down the gangplank, Nancy's mother ran up and embraced the best man, thinking he was her future son-in-law. It took quite some persuasion to convince her that Estes was the bridegroom-to-be.

The Kefauvers, who live here in an apartment at 1801 16th st. nw., now have three children. The youngest, Diane Carey, was born at Garfield Hospital just before last Christmas. Their two other children are Eleanor, 6, and David, 2.

If Kefauver wins a six-year term to the Senate next November—and he is confident that he will—the family probably will be around Washington for a long time to come.

With "Old Ironsides" it has always been just one term after another.

Crump Outfit Badly Beaten

political enemy. He pitched his campaign on a "down with one-man rule" slogan.

Concedes Defeat

McCord conceded his defeat today as did Stewart. Crump made no statement. Stewart was another one-time ally of Crump but was dropped by the Memphis politico in this campaign.

Democratic nomination in Tennessee usually means election.

But Roy Acuff, ballad singer nominated for Governor in yesterday's Republican primary, and Carroll Reece, former GOP national chairman, nominated for the Senate, said they'd make it a contest in the November general election.

Kefauver Vote Surprises

The biggest surprise of yesterday's results was in the vote piled up in Memphis by Kefauver. Heretofore a Crump opponent could count his vote there in the hundred or low thousands.

Out of 111 of Shelby's 126 precincts, Kefauver polled 21,181 votes. Browning didn't fare as well there, but he amassed a heavy vote elsewhere in the State.

Dayton E. Phillips and John Jennings, GOP Congressmen from the First and Second Districts, respectively, were virtually assured of renomination on the basis of unofficial and incomplete returns.

Nomination in the two Republican districts usually is tantamount to election.

Representative Wirt Courtney, however, was depending on seven unreported precincts of his seventh Democratic District to give him a margin of victory.

Phillips of Elizabethton, who was seeking his second term, was ahead of William E. Miller, Johnson City lawyer, with returns in from 224 of the district's 282 precincts. He led, 24,110 votes to 19,605.

Jennings, aspiring for a fifth full term in the House, led his hometown opponent, Hobart Atkins of Knoxville, 15,225 votes to 11,622 with unofficial returns in from 180 of the second district's 254 precincts.

Lead Changes Often

The closest congressional race was that between Courtney and Pat Sutton, Young Lawrenceburg merchant. The lead changed hands several times as unofficial counting progressed. With 270 of 277 precincts in, Courtney led 19,487 to 19,367 for Sutton.

In the Third District (Democrat) scramble for Representative Estes Kefauver's seat, James E. Frazier, former United States District Attorney of Chattanooga, held a commanding lead in unofficial returns from 226 of the 261 precincts.

The vote at that time was:

Frazier 25,228; John C. Hammer State utilities commissioner, 11,184, and Robert Morrison, Chattanooga musician and union leader, 8353.

Unopposed in their bids for renomination were these Democratic Representatives:

Fourth District, Albert Gore; Fifth, Joe Evins; Sixth, Percy Priest; Eighth, Tom Murray; Ninth, Jere Cooper, and Tenth; Cliff Davis.

strong organization in Crump's Shelby County bailiwick, headed by some of the leading citizens of the community. This, he explained, was the chief reason he was able to pile up a sensational 29,000 votes in Shelby against 35,000 for Crump's man, Judge John A. Mitchell.

Kefauver said that Crump had lost control of the State, and had almost lost control of his own county.

"I think he's finished," the Congressman said.

As for Reece, he said the former GOP national chairman did not have a strong organization, and he pointed to instances where his favorites had lost in Thursday's primary.

Friends of Reece, however, said he felt he had a good chance to become the first Republican to be elected to the Senate from Tennessee since Reconstruction days. They quoted him as saying that he would not have got into the race unless he did think his prospects were good.

Whether Reece was counting on support from Boss Crump, open or otherwise, could not be determined.

During the campaign, Gordon Browning, who was seeking the Democratic nomination for Governor in the face of Crump's violent opposition, tried to make the old "Red Snapper" show his hand.

Browning challenged Crump to "tell the people which party nominees he and his political organization will support in November if his puppet candidates in the primary are repudiated at the polls."

Crump's answer was: "I have never voted for a Republican in my life and I never expect to."

This might be expected to end all the talk about Crump helping Reece. However, those who give some credence to the talk point out that Crump would not necessarily have to vote for Reece himself in order to help him.

Stassen Backs Ball in Race For Senator

South St. Paul, Aug. 6 (U.P.).—Harold E. Stassen, unsuccessful candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, today indorsed United States Senator Joseph H. Ball, for reelection.

Eight years ago, when Stassen was Governor of Minnesota, he appointed Ball to the Senate to fill a vacancy. In recent years, widening divergence of views between the two led some observers to believe that Stassen might not "go along" with Ball in his struggle for reelection.

In his statement indorsing Ball, whom he called "an able and courageous Senator," Stassen emphasized a hope that Ball eventually would change his mind on some issues in which there has been disagreement.

Stassen said that "every seat will count" toward piling up a Republican majority in Congress to work "with the Republican President."

He said Ball "would clearly be a much better Senator for Minnesota than his opponent."

He said he disagreed with Ball's position on aid to Europe and with his early stand on labor legislation, although he agreed with him that the Taft-Hartley law was necessary and "as a whole" good for labor and the Nation.

ment League. The GGL had a full slate of candidates in the field in yesterday's county election which was held along with the State primary.

The gunplay apparently was touched off by the election tenseness, but no official spokesman has yet openly blamed the disorder on political strife.

Small groups lingered around the courthouse as one ballot box—from Copperhill—remained out.

Copperhill GGL leader R. E. Barclay and a group of supporters were reported guarding the Copperhill ballot box, six miles from here. Frank Lowery, State representative and GGL member, said they were waiting for a National Guard escort before bringing it to town.

Accounts of disputes over absentee ballots in the Copperhill and Ducktown precincts aroused fears that arrival of the boxes might precipitate trouble. However, the Ducktown box was delivered without incident during the day.

The first shooting occurred near here yesterday when, Biggs said, Donald Lands, 28, was killed and Edwin Shearer, 32, critically wounded by ambushers. The body of Ernest Loudermilk, shot in the back, was found in the road near Ducktown early today, a Ducktown undertaker said.

Undertaker H. E. Brewer said four other persons were wounded in election-night shootings.

Biggs said Shearer's father was a candidate for Justice of Peace in yesterday's election.

Brewer listed the other wounded as Wayne Kimsey, 33; Chester Goode, 28; Hardy (Cobby) Loudermilk and Loudermilk's wife. Brewer said he had no details.

Primary Today For 10 Kentucky Congress Seats

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 6 (AP).—Kentucky voters will choose Republican and Democratic candidates Saturday for one United States Senate seat and for nine places in the House.

Chief interest during the campaign has focused on the Democratic senatorial contest between Representative Virgil Chapman of Paris and former Representative John Young Brown of Lexington and Milton Whitworth, Commonwealth's attorney at Elizabethtown.

Chapman campaigned with the indorsement of Gov. Earle Clements' administration and Brown ran with the indorsement of various labor groups. Whitworth pegged his race on "a shoestring—an untied shoestring."

Brown and his organized labor supporters have criticized Chapman's voting record in Congress, particularly on the Taft-Hartley Act.

Republican Senator John Sherman Cooper of Somerset is opposed for the GOP nomination by Silas A. Sullivan of Jamestown.

All incumbent Representatives except Chapman in the Sixth Congressional District are candidates for renomination. Three have no primary opposition.

Democratic Party Chiefs Visit Truman

The White House was the scene Thursday night of an unusual gathering of high-ranking Democratic leaders of past and present to discuss campaign strategy with President Truman, it was announced yesterday.

Charles G. Ross, presidential press secretary, said there had been a "frank and comprehensive discussion of the whole political situation." One of those present, however, reported that no decisions had been made.

Among those taking part in the discussions, which began at dinner at 6:30 p. m. and continued in the President's study until 10:30 o'clock, were five former Democratic national chairmen.

Also attending were Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, present Democratic national chairman, and Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, Democratic vice-presidential candidate.

The former Democratic national chairmen at the gathering were George White, former Governor of Ohio and party chairman during the unsuccessful campaign of James M. Cox, Democratic presidential candidate in 1920; former Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, wh had preceded White as chairman, and Edward J. Flynn of New York; Robert E. Hannegan of St. Louis, and Frank C. Walker of New York, all of whom held the post in recent years.

Other living former Democratic national chairmen had been invited, but for one reason or another could not attend. One of these was Clem Shaver of West Virginia. Others included James A. Farley of New York, who is on a trip to Europe; former Secretary of State Cordell Hull, chairman from 1921 to 1924, who is ill, and John J. Raskob, 1928 chairman, who no longer is active in politics.

Cox, who was Governor of Ohio before he became the 1920 Democratic presidential candidate, also was invited but could not attend.

Ross said in answer to a question that President Truman has no present plans for taking a vacation before he opens his campaign in September. Ross said this did not mean the President would not take a rest; it was just that the subject had not been discussed, he said.

Senator Ernest W. McFarland (D., Ariz.), a caller at the White House yesterday, assured Mr. Truman he would carry Arizona

American troops from China, Korea and Greece; break diplomatic and economic ties with Spain; abandon the Marshall Plan in favor of nonpolitical economic aid to European nations, with first priority to "victims of Facist attack," meaning the Soviet Union.

Grant independence to Puerto Rico, aid colonial development in Latin American countries "without infringement on national sovereignty," recognize Israel and lift the embargo.

Repeal the Taft-Hartley law, restore price control without freezing wages, provide Federal cut-price, low-rent housing, minimum wages, old age pensions, health insurance, increase aid to education, guarantee income to farmers; curb monopolies and "trusts," raise taxes on high incomes and excess profits, exempt low-bracket incomes from taxes. The Communists, but not the Progressives, demand a capital levy to finance social legislation.

A long section of the Communist platform calls for social and civil equality for Negroes, and their civil rights section attacks anti-semitism, anti-Catholicism, and all forms of racial and religious discrimination. Most of the section is devoted to a defense of the Communist Party, and a demand for the abolition of the House Un-American Activities Committee and the "witch hunts, loyalty orders and phony spy scares." This also largely parallels the Progressive platform.

On the question of force and violence—the issue in the indictment of the Communist leaders—the Communist answer is less direct than that of the Progressives. The Progressives said firmly "We oppose the use of violence . . . by any individual or group, including . . . those who are attempting to suppress political dissent."

The Communists said: "It is not the Communists who advocate or practice force and violence, but the monopolists, the KKK, the lynch mobs and the Fascist hoodlum gangs . . . we condemn and reject the policy and practice of terror and assassination and repudiate the advocates of force and violence. We Communists seek only the opportunity to compete fairly in the marketplace of ideas, asking only that our program and proposals be considered on their merit."

"We are Marxist, not adventurers nor conspirators," the Communist platform said.

The Communists concluded with the statement that only "a socialist reorganization of society" will bring peace and prosperity and realize "the great American dream of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Except for a two-paragraph statement of this ideal, however, the document contained no promise of how it could be achieved, comparable to the Progressive Party's description of its schemes for a planned economy and public ownership of key industries.

The Communists said they supported the public ownership program "only as part of the fight for a people's democratic government."

Red Pattern Seen In Dayton Strike

By The Associated Press

A Dayton, Ohio, police officer said yesterday he is quite certain that a strike at the Univis Lens Co. plant there followed the "Communistic pattern."

The officer, Inspector Frank Krug, told a House Labor Subcommittee he had no knowledge that the strike was Communist-directed or dominated.

But, he said, "Many things occurred which would lead me to believe they were done in a pattern which we have been led to believe is followed by the Communist Party."

"You are quite certain that this followed the Communistic pattern?" asked Representative Fisher (D., Texas).

"Quite certain," Krug replied.

Krug told in detail of disorders outside the strike-bound plant, where members of the United Electrical Workers walked out last May.

He said there had been no brutality on the part of police, despite provocation on the part of strikers and pickets. Men and women in the picket line, he said, called the police vile names, kicked them, and hurled pennies at them.

At the start, he said, he directed the police not to reply or take any notice of verbal attacks. Last week, he said, when he heard that there would be massed pickets to keep workers from entering the plant, he ordered his men to use force to repel force.

On July 30, he said, he had 165 men outsidle the plant, but they were unable to cope with the situation. He said there were at least 700 pickets and a crowd of 13,000 around the plant. Troops were summoned the next day and took over Monday.

Near the close of the hearing Chairman Hoffman (R., Mich.) said he had learned that National Guard troops were withdrawn from the plant.

Lou Kaplan, union field organizer, had a brush with Chairman Hoffman (R., Mich.) at the start of yesterday's hearing.

The union leader declined to answer questions about his activities on July 28, saying a court case was pending against him at Dayton and that, without admitting any guilt, he declined to answer on grounds that he might incriminate himself.

"We are not going to excuse you any longer," Hoffman said. "Anything you tell this committee cannot be used against you in a criminal proceeding. Now, what did you do that day?"

"Under the fifth amendment," began Kaplan.

"Let's forget that. Answer the question," said Hoffman.

"You are very rude to interrupt me—" Kaplan started.

"I'm going to try to make you answer the question," said Hoffman.

Both talked at once for a time. Ultimately Kaplan said his answer was that he declined to answer under the fifth amendment. To several other questions Kaplan said "Same answer."

"All right, step aside," Hoffman finally said.

The chairman said Thursday that it will be up to the full committee to decide whether to cite any of the witnesses for contempt for failure to answer questions. He did not mention a possible contempt citation in his exchange with Kaplan yesterday.

The hearing, Hoffman said several times, was to detetrmine if any violations of the Taft-Hartley Act were involved, whether the law needed amendments, and whether such disorders grew out of the strige or were instigated by "subversive influences."

Governor Withdraws Guardsmen at Univis

Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 6 (AP).—National Guardsmen, having restored order at the Univis Lens Plant, struck their tents late today and left the job of maintaining peace to the strikers, nonstrikers and local authorities.

"It has been demonstrated," said Gov. Thomas J. Herbert in ordering withdrawal of the troops, "that workers who desire to work can do so in peace and safety."

Mayor Louis Lohrey, whose call for help brought the troops Tuesday following several days of violence on a picket line, shared the Governor's confidence.

"We are assuming," he said, "that everyone will abide by law and order."

for an unannounced destination to take the testimony of a mystery witness reported to be able to break the entire Washington spy case "wide open."

2. Plans are under way to recall both Alger Hiss, former top-ranking State Department official, and Whittaker Chambers, a senior editor on Time Magazine for further study of apparent conflicts in their testimony.

3. On the Senate side, the top investigating subcommittee abruptly closed its public hearings into the operations of the loyalty program. Chairman Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) stated that the President's order closing all files on loyalty of Federal employes to the Congress made it impossible to ascertain how the 11-million-dollar loyalty program is progressing. He said the committee will continue in closed sessions and will exhaust every legal method of obtaining the information necessary to survey the program.

4. The Treasury Department has asked Solomon Adler, one of those mentioned as a member of a Communist spy ring, to take his annual leave pending hearing of charges before a loyalty board. Miss Elizabeth T. Bentley, who told the House Un-American Activities Committee that Adler was a member of a group headed by Nathan Gregory Silvermaster but she did not know him personally, has been asked to testify before the loyalty board. Treasury took action after Miss Bentley testified last Saturday. Adler is one of the two remaining employes President Truman said had been suspended. The other was William W. Remington of the Commerce Department.

5. Chairman Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, said his committee is deeply interested in the sending of uranium ore to Russia but is not conducting any formal investigation at this time.

6. Chairman Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.) of the House Committee on Un-American Activities said he hoped members of the special subcommittee will be able to report today to the full committee on their findings from the mystery witness. Mundt said open hearings will probably be held Monday or Tuesday with the unnamed witness the star attraction. He is a man who never held a position with the Government of the United States.

7. The House committee meanwhile has subpenaed a long list of those mentioned during the course of the testimony of Miss Bentley and Whittaker Chambers. Lauchlin Currie, former administrative assistant to the late President Roosevelt, has asked to testify and will be heard. Currie was mentioned by Miss Bentley as not a Communist but a source of information for her group.

8. Frank Coe, 1918 N. Roosevelt st., Arlington, formerly with the Treasury Department, mentioned by Miss Bentley as having been a member of the Silvermaster group, yesterday wrote to the House Committee on Un-American Activities requesting an opportunity to deny Miss Bentley's charges under oath. The opportunity will be forthcoming, the committee said. Coe is now secretary of the International Monetary Fund. His salary, tax free, is $14,000 a year. Coe was one of those who testified before the New York grand jury which indicted 12 leaders of the Communist Party.

9. Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, wartime head of the Manhattan Project, said yesterday he did not declared, why was not the grand jury asked to make a presentment, so the people might benefit from the tax money that has been spent."

The grand jury proceedings, according to the Justice Department, cost the Government half a million dollars.

Justice sources also said that the espionage laws were inadequate to cover the situation disclosed to the grand jury.

ship any uranium to Russia and added "it would be a fairly good assumption" it was done without his knowledge.

McDowell charged yesterday that the sending of atomic materials to Russia at the height of atomic bomb research was an appeasement gesture.

He stressed that the material sent was of a highly refined nature. During the course of his investigation McDowell made a number of trips to Oak Ridge, Tenn., it was learned.

It was on March 23, 1943, that the 200 pounds of uranium oxide and 220 pounds of uranium nitrate were flown from Great Falls, Mont., to Moscow, McDowell declared. The material he said was furnished by the S. W. Shattuck Chemical Co. of Denver to Col. A. N. Kotikov of the Soviet Purchasing Commission.

Seward Potter, general manager of Shattuck's, said the purchases were ordered by the Chemitar corp. of New York by mail.

Order Flown to Russia

"The Government knew nothing of the order until we informed them of it," Potter declared, "and when they were informed, the proper agencies immediately cleared the shipment for export."

Potter declared that "the Russians wanted all the material they could get." He said no agents called on the firm but everything was handled through correspondence.

The Denver concern, which said it is the only agent "outside the Atomic Energy Commission" which manufactures the uranium compounds, said it notified the Army and the Navy of the Russian order just as soon as it was received.

The Atomic Energy Commission now checks all uranium sales.

This order, it was learned, was flown to Russia in a Lend-Lease plane.

"Somebody Woke Up"

On another date, McDowell said, in the same year 500 pounds of uranium nitrate and 500 pounds of black uranium oxide were sent from Great Falls to Colonel Kotikov. This, McDowell declared, was shipped from Port Hope, Ontario, by the Canadium Radium and Uranium Corp.

After the Russians received the last 1000 pounds. McDowell continued, "they came back and wanted 15 tons but then somebody woke up and so far as I know this order was not permitted to be filled." He added that the 1943 shipments were in addition to a "significant quantity" of metal and heavy water, also used in atomic work, flown in 1943.

McDowell charged that 25 pounds of uranium metal was flown secretly to Russia in 1945. He said that in addition 2700 pounds of uranium compounds were delivered to the Soviet government during the war.

The Russians had advised the United States in 1943, McDowell said, that it wanted the uranium compounds for experiments in medicine and physics.

"Pressure of Highest Kind"

McDowell did not specify whether the 25 pounds of uranium metal consisted of "natural uranium," a mixture of the explosive U-235 and nonexplosive U-238, or whether it was U-235 alone.

McDowell said the Russians obtained the metal as a result of "pressure of the highest kind." He said his information was derived from the testimony of more than 30 persons heard in secret sessions.

On the Senate side, Chairman Ferguson yesterday released an exchange of correspondence with Attorney General Tom C. Clark.

Clark said that on the basis of President Truman's own directive of March 13, 1948, he would have to decline to furnish the committee with confidential information furnished Government departments about Remington.

No Contempt Move Planned

Ferguson said the committee has authority to use contempt proceedings to try to force the release of the material it wants, but he stated no such move was contemplated at this time because of the early adjournment of Congress.

President Truman has termed the whole congressional Communist inquiry "a red herring" to draw attention away from his anti-inflation program.

The Michigan Senator also said that he wanted to call attention to the fact that the New York grand jury, called by the Justice Department, could have issued a presentment to show that the public interest had been threatened.

If the President was correct when he said all the facts presented in Congress had been disclosed to the grand jury, Ferguson

King Retires As Canadian Leader at 74

Ottawa, Aug. 6 (U.P.).—Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King, retiring at 74, today called communism "the greatest menace of our times" and said the free nations of the world may have to defend their freedom with their lives at any hour.

King addressed the National Liberal Party convention in his valedictory after almost 30 years as leader of the party, which names a new leader tomorrow. King asked that his name not be presented. He will resign as Prime Minister after a new party leader is chosen.

"Nations have yet to decide which is to prevail: The law of blood and of death, ever imagining new means of destruction and forcing nations to be constantly ready for the battlefield; or the law of peace, work and health, ever evolving new means of delivering man from the scourges which beset him," King said.

King said the supreme task of liberalism was to thwart the growth of totalitarianism, and "by so doing, successfully to combat the menace of communism."

He said the trend toward totalitarianism was the most serious of present-day world problems.

Idaho's Progressive Party leaders said, however, that they had a written agreement from the school board to use the school auditorium and would take legal action to hold the board to its promise.

J. J. Church, school board chairman, declined to comment.

Act to safeguard veterans' priorities.

Four resolutions on communism were carried over for consideration today without debate.

The convention last night passed resolutions favoring a permanent women's reserve for the Coast Guard; favoring legislation to reduce the high cost of living; recommending maintenance of veterans employment service as a Federal function; requesting action by the Veterans Administration to extend for one year the period within which veterans may reinstate national service life insurance policies without physical examination, and directing letters of condolence be sent to the families of General Pershing and Secretary Lewis B. Schwellenbach, both Legionnaires.

The District Legionnaires also asked their national organization to investigate reports that the Department of the Navy has been kept from expressing its views on maintenance of its own integrated air arm. If the report is found to be true, they asked that the Navy as well as the Department of the Air Force be permitted to give its views.

The Watson B. Miller trophy, awarded to the post whose member has been distinguished for unselfish service to the Legion during the past year, was awarded to U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post No. 2 for Mrs. Anne Frame's work in behalf of the Legion housing program. Mrs. Frame was awarded a plaque.

Awards were presented by Hampton Percy to the following Legion posts for their membership growth:

Belvoir Again Gets Group for Basic Training

The upsurge in Army enlistments during July has caused Fort Belvoir (Va.) to become a basic training center again.

The Army Engineer center at Fort Belvoir has been strictly a technical training ground since the war, but beginning Monday, the fort will once more resound to the cries of drill sergeants, officers reported yesterday.

Two hundred and forty-three recruits, ranging in age from 17 to 20, arrived Thursday evening from Fort Dix, N. J., where facilities were inadequate to take care of the influx of men who preferred enlisting to waiting to be drafted.

Fort Belvoir officers expect the group will be followed by additional recruits for basic training, as the Engineer center has barrack space for some 25,000 men. At present, the center houses about 7000.

In accordance with the latest Army Department policy, the group transferred from Fort Dix was met and greeted by high ranking officers of the post, as well as the music of the 356th Army Band.

Their basic training will begin Monday when they are moved to the 410th Engineer Construction Battalion. The 8-week training will include use of the rifle, infantry drill, physical and mental hygiene lectures, military courtesy and orientation on Army facilities.

Report by Army Is Withdrawn, Then Reinstated

Secretary of Defense Forrestal yesterday suddenly recalled, then reinstated, a printed report of a committee appointed to study utilization of military reserve organizations.

The recall and the decision to release the report unchanged were attributed by Pentagon officials to a "snafu" within the department.

The document is for publication next Wednesday.

Reports circulated at the Pentagon that the publication had been called back because it recommends removing the National Guard from State control and placing it under the Army.

Advance copies of the report had just been distributed to Pentagon reporters late yesterday when they were gathered up.

Antiaircraft Fire Closes Camp Stay

District Guardsmen at Camp Pendleton, Va., yesterday got in their last rounds of antiaircraft practice before preparing to break camp and return home.

The 260th Antiaircraft Artillery Group practiced firing 90-millimeter guns at the Navy's range at Dam Neck and Company B of the AA unit achieved a firing speed of 30 rounds a minute.

Today the Guardsmen will clean barracks and equipment for final inspection before leaving for home early Sunday.

Meanwhile, the District National Air Guard, at Dover, Del., for a two-week training period, yesterday, resumed its firing practice along the Atlantic coast. The Air Guard made aerial-gunnery flights on the Navy's overwater Chincoteague range.

Today the Air Guard training will continue with a full day's schedule of flying. Sunday the unit will fly and march in review for Governor's Day ceremonies. Governor Tuck of Virginia and Governor Lane of Maryland are expected to be present for this ceremony.

Food Prices to Go Still Higher, Says Agriculture Dept.

Retail food prices are likely to go still higher during the next few months, the Agriculture Department said yesterday.

Meats and other livestock products will lead the advance.

A department report on the national food situation said two factors appear likely to push prices higher:

(1) Record consumer buying power, and (2) a decline in the output of meats and other livestock products.

Because of the rising prices and relative scarcity of some items, the amount of food consumed by the average person during the remainder of the year is expected to be slightly below levels of the past two years. Nevertheless, the amount will be high compared with prewar averages, when there was less buying power.

Cavein Kills 5 W. Va. Miners

Welch, W. Va., Aug. 6 (U.P.).—Five miners were killed and eight injured today in a cave-in far back in the Capels Mine of the New River & Pocahontas Consolidated Coal Co.

It was the worst mine disaster in more than 2½ years in West Virginia. Fourteen miners were killed and 30 injured in an explosion at another mine of the same company on January 15, 1946.

John Hansford, of the State mines department, said a chunk of slate 27 feet long, 12 feet wide and 10 inches thick dropped on top of three small cars carrying the men.

Hansford said the slate apparently dropped because of "sweating." He said there was no indication of negligence.

Crop Damage Eased as Sun Replaces Rain

The sunny change in the weather yesterday, coupled with bright prospects for the weekend, eased fears of multimillion dollar damage to Maryland and Virginia crops.

However, persistent rains earlier this week did destroy 60 to 65 per cent of the Eastern Shore tomato crop in Maryland, according to Calvin Skinner, secretary of the Tri-State Packers Association at Easton, Md.

Damage to other Maryland crops was estimated at on emillion dollars by Dr. Howard L. Stier, chief of the Maryland Department of Markets, University of Maryland agricultural extension service.

In Virginia, benefits of the wet weather to the late tobacco crop as well as to hay and pasture and corn probably outweigh damage to tomatoes and other crops, Henry M. Taylor, chief statistician for the State Agricultufe Department reported.

Sunny and a little warmer weather with the highest temperature near 82 is the District forecast for today. More of the same is expected Sunday.

The temperature dipped here to 57 at 5:18 a.m. yesterday, the coolest August 6 since 1912 when a record low of 53 was recorded. During the day, the temperature warmed up to 79 at 4:06 p. m. Washington has had only one colder day this year, June 17, when the mercury dropped to 52.

Weather Bureau experts explained that the cool air mosied down from the Hudson Bay region of Canada.

Export, Import Gap Narrows

The gap between exports and imports narrowed markedly in June, the Commerce Department reported yesterday, as exports declined and imports jumped 12 per cent above May.

The excess of exports reached "the lowest point in many months," the department said. Overseas shipments were valued at $1,013,000,000, 8 per cent below May exports and 21 per cent below the 1947 monthly average.

On the other hand, general imports in June totaled $615,600,000, or 12 per cent above May and 29 per cent above last year's average.

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—Average hourly earnings of production workers in 25 manufacturing industries reached a new peak in May but average weekly earnings declined, the National Industrial Conference Board reported today.

The hourly average was slightly more than $1.43 for the twenty-eighth consecutive monthly advance, said the independent research organization.

The increase in average hourly earnings from April to May, the board said, was seven tenths of 1 per cent—the biggest monthly rise since September, 1947.

New Homes Planned At Army Posts Here

50% Too High

Expert Cites Food Parcel Overcharge

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—A former American military government official maintained today that Americans "are being taken for a ride on charitable shipments" of food and other gift parcels to needy Germans.

The one-time official, Earl Reinsel, charged that private stores and agencies handling the parcels are reaping "unbelievable profits" and that in many cases markups range beyond 100 per cent.

Reinsel, a resident of Hamburg, Pa., was AMG's chief of property control in Germany. He returned here six weeks ago after retiring from his post.

Last year, he said, Americans sent 22 million gift parcels to German civilians at a cost of about 250 million dollars. The cost, he added, was 50 per cent more than they should have paid.

Reinsel emphasized these figures did not include shipments made by such charitable agencies as CARE (the Cooperative for American Remittances to Europe), but only stores and private agencies in business for profit.

Reinsel said CARE has "a wonderful reputation in Europe."

Several New York firms that handle gift parcels denied there was profiteering in the field as far as they, individually, were concerned.

In one instance, Reinsel said, a large New York department store advertised gift packages at $10.95 each. Actually, Reinsel added, the average retail cost of the commodities in the package was $5.32. Counting the postage, the package could be sent for $7.85 if the sender shopped for it and mailed it himself, he said.

Construction of additional family units at Fort George G. Meade, Md., and at Fort Belvoir, Va., is included in the Army's $612,700,000 expansion program, details of which were announced yesterday by Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall.

The program of the Corps of Engineers included spending of $710,440 for such work at Fort Meade and $356,056 at Belvoir.

The Army gave its engineers $3,525,100 for special military construction at the secret guided missile center at White Sands, N. Mex.

It also allotted $40,907,085 to bolster the Nation's ramparts in Alaska, where a lack of housing has forced a delay in plans to increase ground force strength.

Of the total funds in the expansion program, $151 million dollars was earmarked for Army and Air Force construction in 27 States and 10 overseas areas.

The Army engineers also will spend 429 million dollars during the fiscal year ending next June 30 for such things as equipment, maps, research and maintenance operations. In additoin, Congress gave them $32,700,000 extra to continue work underway in Guam, Okinowa and Alaska—mostly housing.

The major item in the White Sands allotment is a dust-proof assembly plant for guided missiles. Army, Air Force and Navy ordnance experts have been testing captured V-2 rockets at the desert proving ground for some time. Plans for an assembly plant indicated progress in producing similar missiles of American design.

The Army also set aside $1,228,800 for an experimental hydro-electric pilot plant and a mixing building at the Picatinny Arsenal in New Jersey.

Dewey Gets 'No' on DPs

of closed hearings. (A tie vote rejects a proposition.)

Several Republican Senators are reported to have urged Revercomb to permit the amendment. Revercomb said yesterday's committee action included two votes. The first was to open hearings. Revercomb said the vote on this was 3-1 against the hearings.

Those present yesterday were Revercomb, Donnell (R., Mo.), Cooper (R., Ky.) and McGrath (D., R. I.). It was not reported how they voted, but it is known that McGrath has sponsored a bill to change the law, and Cooper also has favored a change.

Fifth member of the Judiciary Subcommittee, which handles immigration legislation, is Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) who is in Reno. Chairman Revercomb said McCarran had telegraphed him from Reno saying he was opposed to changes in the law.

Revercomb flatly denied a published report that either Dewey or Gov. Earl Warren of California, the GOP vice presidential candidate, had threatened to come to West Virginia to explain their views unless Revercomb agreed to the amendment. Revercomb is running for reelection.

He said he doesn't think Dewey ever made such a threat, but he added: "in fairness to Governor Dewey I should say he does favor that change as soon as possible."

Sea Wreckage Clinches Plane Blast Theory

New York, Aug. 6 (U.P.).—The Coast Guard announced today that there appeared little doubt that an Air France flying boat that disappeared last Sunday exploded and burned with 52 persons aboard.

It said the Coast Guard cutter Campbell, sailing through a sea of charred wreckage 1200 miles from Dakar, Africa, radioed Coast Guard headquarters here that it had picked from the wreckage three leather-covered plane seats.

The flotsam was found only 70 miles from the plane's designated course from Martinique to West Africa. A Coast Guard correspondent radioed that it had not been determined whether the six-engine Latecoere 631 had burned before or after an explosion.

Third Turin Attack

Worst Aussie Quake

Adelaide, Australia, Aug. 6 (U.P.).—The worst earthquake in 46 years shook this south Australian city today, causing widespread damage but no known casualties. The damage could not be estimated immediately.

Reds Demand Danube Rule By East Alone

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Aug 6 (AP).—Russia asked the Danube Conference today to brush aside American proposals and concentrate instead on a Soviet plan to place the river under the exclusive domination of eastern Europe's Communist states.

In making this move Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vishinsky also rejected a British proposal that the International Court at The Hague be asked to determine the present validity of previous Danube agreements.

With the Communist states in the majority and voting as a bloc, acceptance of the Russian plan was regarded as certain. The test will come tomorrow on the question of adopting a working draft for a new Danube Convention to replace the 1921 Paris accord.

Vishinsky scoffed at a western proposal that the Danube control board should work closely with the United Nations. Disagreeing with a Western contention that the U.N. should have been permitted to send observers to the conference, Vishinsky said:

"We don't need a supervisor or governess here to see that the little boys are not naughty."

Romanian Foreign Minister Ana Pauker accused the United States of trying to use "dollar diplomacy" to obtain a strong position in the Danubian basin.

Canada Envoy Resigns; Made U. N. Alternate

Ray Atherton has resigned as Ambassador to Canada and has been appointed an alternate delegate to the forthcoming General Assembly of the United Nations in Paris.

This was disclosed by the White House yesterday when it made public an exchange of letters between Atherton and President Truman.

Atherton was named Minister to Canada July 8, 1943, and became the first United States Ambassador when the Ottawa Legation was raised to an embassy November 19, 1943.

In his letter accepting Atherton's resignation as Ambassador, Mr. Truman said:

"The United States has been fortunate to have been so ably represented in Canada during the five years you have been in Ottawa. Your long experience in international affairs and your appreciation of the importance of the relationship between the United States and Canada have contributed greatly to the high degree of mutual understanding now existing between the two countries."

Atherton's resignation as Ambassador becomes effective September 1.

which reportedly is suffering extensive food shortages, today received a promise of increased rations if the new harvest comes up to expectations.

On the currency front, western occupation authorities announced that attempts to reach satisfactory arrangements for the release of blocked east-mark accounts "have now been brought to nothing because of the insistence of the bank of issue (in the Russian sector) upon clearly unacceptable conditions."

Consequently, the three western powers authorized loans in west-marks for western sector firms whose east-marks have been blocked so they could pay wages.

Rene K. Oshana, an American civilian, was released today by the Russians after four days which he said he spent "in a stinking jail cell filled with criminals" because he drove into the Soviet sector by mistake.

Oshana, 36, of Chicago, is assistant supervisor for an Army education center here. He was picked up by the Russians Tuesday.

"The food they gave me was so horrible I couldn't eat it," said Oshana.

[The United Press reported that an angry crowd near the eastern boundaries of the American sector attacked an officer of Communist Police Chief Paul Markgraf's "secessionist" Soviet-sector force today when he chased a black-market suspect across the Russian sector boundary. The crowd bombarded the policeman with rubble, bricks and stones until he ran back into the Russian district.

[Tracy S. Voorhees, Assistant Secretary of the Army, and Maj. Gen. Thomas Larkin, Army quartermaster general, arrived by air for a two-day stay. Voorhees would not comment except to emphasize that he and Larkin were "here on business."]

Britain Urges 4-Year Food Plan in Europe

London, Aug. 6 (U.P.).—Britain today proposed that the Marshall Plan nations adopt a four-year plan under which western Europe will be able to feed herself by 1952.

The British proposal for self-sufficiency in four years was made in a working paper submitted to the organization for European Economic Cooperation in Paris.

It was presented as Britain's reply to a recent demand by Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman that western Europe draw up a master plan of action aimed at full European recovery by 1952.

The British are seeking to have their four-year planned economy program for Europe used as a basis for developing an official Marshall Plan four-year reconstruction program. They said agriculture should be emphasized because most of the old United States loan to Britain and a large part of the Marshall Plan funds now are being "eaten up" in food imports.

Lincoln, Mercury Prices Advanced 5.3 Per Cent

Detroit, Aug. 6 (AP).—Price increases averaging 5.3 per cent on the Ford Motor Co.'s Lincoln and Mercury automobiles were announced today.

The Mercury and Lincoln price advances range from $90 to $150 and those on the Lincoln Cosmopolitan models from $150 to $250.

Reduced production volume due to material shortages and increases in material and labor costs required the increases, the company said.

Ford yesterday increased prices on its Ford models $75 on all styles excepting the six-cylinder business coupe, which was reduced $5.

Envoys Plan Another Talk

was the embassy's minister counselor, Foy Kohler, and British Charge d'Affaires Geoffrey Harrison.

Ambassador Smith called on Molotov at the Kremlin at 5 p. m.

Roberts and Chataigneau entered the Kremlin gates immediately behind him.

It was not until after 8 p. m. that they came out. As yet absolutely nothing has been disclosed as to the essential features of any possible agreement between the western powers and Russia as to the holding of a Big Four conference or anything else.

Up to a late hour last night the western diplomats apparently had expected to have various minor matters ironed out among themselves. The necessary word from the home capitals did not come through however, and any thought of an appointment with Molotov had to be aabndoned until today.

German Government In French Zone Quits

Tubingen, Germany, Aug. 6 (AP).—The German government in the French zone state of Wuerttemberg-Hohenzollern resigned today. The action was in protest, officials said, against reparations and other demands of the French military government.

Government speakers told Parliament today that the French demands were excessive to a point that it was impossible to fulfill them.

The state's trade unions said they had called a one-day strike for Monday in protest.

Off-Bench

Muncipal Judge Ellen K. Raedy reversed a longtime custom Thursday in her contention that what goes on in a "bench conference" between a judge and attorneys is not a matter of public record. Conferences in a judge's private chambers are of course something else, but a cardinal American principle is that anything that goes on in a courtroom is of public concern. The issue at hand involves remarks made by Judge Raedy in open court casting reflections on the corporation counsel's office. Judge Raedy accused that office of nolle prossing drunken driving cases for its friends. She then sought to excuse her remarks on grounds of privacy. That explanation will not wash if for no other reason than that the statement was distinctly audible and was reported by the newspapers. Charges of throwing a case are serious charges, whether or not they are intended for public attention. Judge Raedy owes it to the corporation counsel's office and to the public either to substantiate her claim or to apologize openly.

Faulty Hiring

The three-ring Communist circus on Capitol Hill has scored at least one important point—that Federal administrators were occasionally very naive or very reckless in their hiring of personnel. It is difficult to understand how a man with the record of Nathan Gregory Silvermaster could have obtained a job, let alone a succession of jobs which he held onto for more than a decade, anywhere in the United States Government. The account of his background made public on Wednesday when he appeared before the House Committee on Un-American Activities was certainly no revelation. It had been publicized long before by the old Dies Committee. It was well known, as the records show, to the Civil Service Commission and to the Office of Naval Intelligence. The FBI must have been equally familiar with it.

Yet Mr. Silvermaster was able to secure the indorsement of usually careful and conscientious public officials, even of so indisputably patriotic and exacting an administrator as former Secretary of War Patterson, and to remain on the Federal roster until 1948, despite the fact that examiners and review officials of the Civil Service Commission—not the Commission, mind you—had declared him ineligible for any Government job as early as 1942 and the Dies Committee had started denouncing him in 1938. Why were their warnings ignored? Perhaps it was because the investigators themselves desired to keep Mr. Silvermaster where his actions and associations could be observed. Perhaps it was in some measure because they had so debased the currency in which they were dealing as to make their warnings seem valueless.

The Government's investigating agencies cried "wolf" too frequently. They cried it about many Government employes and job applicants who were in no sense subversive, who had no affiliation whatever with communism and who were guilty of nothing save independence of mind and liberalism. They cried it about many men who nevertheless served their Government valuably and faithfully—men whose services would have been lost to the war effort if certain administrators had not manifested the courage and toughness to override the protests of those who confused conformity with patriotism. Sometimes the investigating agencies employed incredibly naive and absurd criteria in evaluating the suitability of persons for Federal employment—disqualifying them on shadowy grounds such as membership in innocent liberal organizations or because they advocated and practiced racial equality or because they read books and magazines supposed to be dangerously radical. Federal administrators who had jobs to get done had to hire workers in the teeth of such silly objections. And it is not altogether surprising that some of them came to disregard all objections, even valid ones, from these sources.

Today, the investigators have the upper hand. They completely control Federal personnel policy. Anyone at whom they point even the most wavering finger of suspicion is likely to be blacklisted so far as the Government is concerned. Great care in hiring Government employes is indubitably necessary in these times when Communists willingly serve as a fifth column for the Soviet Union. But great care is no less necessary to avoid the stigmatization of loyal Americans and the exclusion from the Government of honest men urgently needed to carry on its vital work. Zeal in keeping the Communists out should not be permitted to result in letting in only the ordinary, the sterile, the second rate.

Mundt's Admission

Representative Mundt let the tiger out of the bag in his statement about the object of the House spy inquiry of which he is acting chairman. He said the object is to "expose, call attention of the proper authorities to the spying, write letters, make press statements, and try to needle Tom Clark into action." In other words, the committee's action is a vote of no-confidence in the Executive in the discharge of his constitutional duty faithfully to execute the laws. So the House Committee is going over the grounds covered by the grand jury in New York which after a three-year million-dollar investigation returned no indictments against the persons who are being put on the grid in Congress. In effect the committee is usurping the function of a grand jury. We ask, in all seriousness, whether this is the way of a government of powers divided among the executive, the legislature, and the judiciary. Beware, warned Jefferson, of the tyranny of the legislature.

The President calls the inquiry a red herring. To some extent, of course, he is right, as is clear to anybody who listens to the House proceedings. Examples: "He is a Republican, isn't he?" "He is a Democrat, isn't he?" But the presidential ascription does justice neither to the seriousness of the issue of Communist activity in our midst nor to the flagrant disregard of proper procedure in investigating it. Communists, in our opinion, would stop at nothing in serving their Red masters. They are inverted theologians, thoroughly amoral, ever ready to sabotage and destroy. It is the presence of these vipers in our midst, together with our critical relations with Moscow, that accounts for the Red scare and the advantage that the investigators are taking of it.

But it is the purpose of the law to reach out and prosecute termites. And it is the job of the FBI to get the evidence to convict. As to the law, Governor Dewey, in the Dewey-Stassen debate May 17, said "There are 27 acts already that outlaw every conceivable form of subversion." As to the FBI, no institution in the Capital today operates in such favor from the appropriating body. But what the House Committee is doing is telling the American people that neither their courts nor the FBI is giving them protection. This is dangerous procedure—highly dangerous. The legislators' lack of trust in the courts is bound to evoke, if the people take the committee seriously, the same lack of trust in the courts on the part of the people. What is worse, the committee itself is giving an example itself of lawlessness by ignoring due process.

Representative McDowell sought to extract from Mr. Alger Hiss Wednesday an admission that he had had "a fair hearing." Mr. Hiss' reply was to the point:

> Mr. McDowell, I think I have been treated today with great consideration by this committee. I am not happy that I didn't have a chance to meet with the committee privately before there was such a great public press display of what I consider completely unfounded charges against me. Denials do not always catch up with charges.

The answer made an impression which the Representative sought to offset by what was circumstantially a prevarication. "The committee," he said, "does not know in advance what a witness is going to say." Now, Mr. McDowell! Even if you didn't know, why didn't you make sure by listening to witnesses in camera? The answer is that any such protection for the individual would fly in the face of the declared object of Representative Mundt to let the espionage cases "be decided in the court of public opinion, to let the people determine whether the Committee is right, or Attorney General Tom Clark is right." In other words, if the courts won't convict, then a form of lynch rule must prevail. A fine example to provide for the American people—taught as they are to regard justice as the end of government.

Success Story: 1948

What strikes us as the most significant part of the testimony given by Mr. Whittaker Chambers has until now escaped comment, and was not even mentioned in most of the news reports. Mr. Chambers, it seems to us, came pretty close to clearing up one of the deeper mysteries of the Communist psychology, namely, the fascination of the Marxist ideology for young persons who can best be described as the pampered offspring of the privileged bourgeoisie.

Few of the men and women thus far named in the testimony before Senator Ferguson's subcommittee or Representative Thomas' committee concerning Communist espionage activities in Washington could by any stretch of language be called a proletarian or an authentic representative of the oppressed and exploited workers. Accusers and accused alike have had considerably more benefits in the way of environment and education than fall to the lot of the generality of Americans. Miss Bentley's family apparently was well enough heeled to send her through Vassar, a rather expensive and choosy institution. Mr. Chambers is said to have attended the college of Columbia University. Mr. Budenz was exposed to various educational influences indicative of some affluence on the part of his family.

Why, then, are such people anxious to overturn an order of society from which they seem to have so signally benefited? Some time ago Mr. Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, attempted to answer this question in the case of the Hollywood voluptuaries, by ascribing it to a sense of guilt. Such people, he said, know very well in their hearts that they do not deserve to live in sybaritic luxury in a world in which honest and hard-working men often go hungry, and therefore seek to appease their consciences by lending their names to front organizations or by contributing to party funds or joining party claques. Mr. Woll's theory seems to us much too charitable as a general explanation. While it is true that persons of the category he described often have recourse to sleeping medicines, we somehow doubt that their insomnia is due primarily to an excessive solicitude over the plight of the poor.

But Mr. Chambers, we think, came much closer to the truth when, in describing his own renunciation of the Communist Party in 1937, he said:

> The hold which the insidious evil of communism has on its victims is so secure that I could still say to someone at this time: "I know that I am leaving the winning side for the losing one, but it is better to die on the losing side than to live under communism."

And there, we think, you have it. The mesmeric influence that the Comrades are able to exert over the imagination of American youth is nothing more or less than a modernized version of the familiar American success myth. In other words, the impulse that prompts so many smart young Americans to get into the movement well in advance of the inevitable revolution is not very different from the impulse which might have prompted their grandfathers to get in "on the ground floor" of what appeared to be a "sure thing."

Credit Control

The much-watered-down credit control bill that has just passed the House is a feeble weapon for fighting the forces of inflation. The best feature of the bill is the proposed restoration of controls over installment credit. But even that does not go far enough, since other types of consumer credit remain uncontrolled, and, furthermore, even the limited control over installment credit will expire the middle of next March. In our opinion control over consumer credits should be permanently given to the Federal Reserve authorities, to be used not only to restrain unsound expansion of this kind of credit but also as a means of expanding consumer purchasing power in periods of declining business. In any case, there appears to be no good reason for limiting the exercise of this selective instrument of credit control to a few months.

The bill also provides for a permissive increase of only 1 per cent in reserves against member bank time deposits instead of the 4 per cent increase requested by the Administration and for an increase of 3 per cent in reserve requirements against demand deposits instead of the 10 per cent increase urged by the Administration. Failure to extend this provision of the bill to nonmember banks diminishes its effectiveness, since Federal Reserve officials fear that member banks subject to discriminatory treatment may be driven out of the system if reserve requirements are raised. However, probably the inclusion of nonmember banks is politically infeasible at this time; for opposition to such a proposal would be great and might prevent passage of any control legislation at all at this session. In any case, efforts to curb inflation by empowering increases in reserve requirements will probably be chiefly effective as a warning to the banks that undue loan expansion may lead to imposition of the higher reserve requirements. Indeed, Senator Taft may win his bet that the Federal Reserve Board will not order the full authorized 3 per cent increase in required reserves during the next six months. The mere possession of power to do so, nevertheless, will have some restraining effect.

Another provision of the House bill that would have no effect whatever in controlling inflation is that which restores the 35 per cent reserve requirement against deposits in Federal Reserve Banks and the 40 per cent reserve against Federal Reserve note issues. This particular section of the bill is permanent legislation that, as Chairman McCabe of the Reserve Board warns, might ultimately tie up the Reserve Banks' gold, reduce their ability to expand currency, and force the Reserve System to abandon support of the Government bond market. At present, however, the Reserve Banks have reserves far in excess of the proposed reserve requirements, and the psychological restraint on inflation that Representative Wolcott thinks would result from the proposed change is purely imaginary. The proposal is, in short, mischievous from the long-range viewpoint and useless for all immediate purposes. It is greatly to be hoped that the Senate will do a better job.

"Exhibit On The Hill"

In your editorial of August 2, "Exhibit On the Hill," you characterized the espionage hearings now being held before the Committee on Un-American Activities as "a circus of publicity by a muddleheaded and foolish woman who admits that a lack of truth was one of the 'principles' that she embraced when she became involved with the dead man, Golos." As one who was present at the hearings, I wish to call your attention to some gross errors in fact and judgment contained in your editorial.

What perhaps was most impressive in Miss Bentley's testimony was her sobriety, clarity, composure and a complete lack of any hysteria. Is it a sign of being muddleheaded and foolish for a woman to take the courageous stand of informing Government authorities of the nefarious espionage activities of Russian agents?

It would seem that all Americans should welcome the exposure of a spy ring. The very fact that it appears so fantastic is all the more reason why the American people should be kept informed as to the true role of the American Communist as a fifth columnist.

Furthermore, a reading of your own reporting of the hearings by Mary Spargo, and the complete testimony offered, would reveal that Miss Bentley was careful to make the point that while the Communists would lie to the outside world, they would not to their superiors. Whether this is the case or not is not important, but certainly such careful discrimination is not the mark of a "muddleheaded and foolish woman." Moreover, Miss Bentley distinguished scrupulously between those whom she dealt with directly and those with whom she had only second-hand contact.

Finally, the fact that the grand jury saw fit only to indict the avowed leaders of the Communist Party and did not act against the persons whom Miss Bentley exposed, might indicate laxity in certain Administration quarters. "Foolish and muddleheaded" might well be mild terms to describe the criminal neglect of such authorities, as the testimony of Miss Bentley seems to indicate.

ESTHER EPSTEIN.
Washington.

This letter is to express gratification at two editorials in The Washington Post of August 2, one on Miss Bentley, the other on the Moscow negotiations.

It is certainly refreshing to have a little common sense in the public press and at least so much relief from the partisan and hypocritical treatment that has been so nearly universal in the last few years.

PERCY H. THOMAS.

"Meadowland"

James L. Dixon's August 4 letter on Meadowland is a perfect example of the twisted logic that might lead to disaster. To call music propaganda is one thing, but to have it banned is another. The reason that Meadowland is so popular is because people like to hear it. They know, for the most part, that it is as Russian as Tschaikowsky, but music that satisfies, does so whether it was written by Ivan the Terrible or George Washington. Condemning a Russian song is as senseless as chopping down a Japanese cherry tree.

Meadowland is as much a piece of propaganda as God Bless America. The music of any country must be propaganda if it expresses in chords, cadenzas, and crescendos the mood of the country, the unrest of the times, the rhythm of the people.

BARLOW WAGMAN.

Baltic Refugees

Certainly it would be a tragic mistake if this country denied a haven to that handful of brave Balts who staked their all to struggle through stormy seas in a small boat. Have we not been taught to admire the pluck and endurance of the Pilgrim fathers who did that same thing more than three centuries ago? Are not these people the very type that we, in common with all other countries, need? Who could make better citizens than those who have proved their ability to overcome adverse circumstances and to endure hardships in order to escape tyranny?

People of their caliber will be assets, not liabilities, and I trust that those in authority will have sufficient perception to understand this and to smooth the path for their admission and eventual citizenship.

MARGARET W. BROWN.
Washington.

Olympic Competition

On reading the press accounts of the American team and their first victories, I am a little dismayed at the spirit in which they seem to have entered the XIV Olympiad. Perhaps it is the fault of the various newspaper correspondents who, themselves over-exuberant, have given a false impression of complacent, almost aggressive determination to conquer in every field of the sports open for championship.

During the last 12 years, Europeans have had little or no time for such sport, but witnessed instead performances of far greater magnitude and glory that won the admiration of the whole world; the flower of a nation's youth diving not into the cool, calm waters of a swimming pool, but into the red inferno of hell.

No one doubts the formidable strength of the American team, least of all the British, who are competing against $3.75 steaks with 20 cents worth of meat in any form.

It is the most natural thing in the world that each competitor of each of the 59 nations longs to be the one to carry home the freshly won laurels, but the motto of the Olympics is a great one: "The important thing in the Olympic games is not winning but taking part. The essential thing in life is not conquering but fighting well."

Austrian Totalitarianism

It was comforting to read Ferdinand Kuhn's article on Vienna and to find that there is at least one point of contact between ourselves and Soviet occupation authorities where little or no friction has developed. I must, however, take issue with Mr. Kuhn's appraisal of democratic life in Austria and with his prediction that the "little democracy" will continue its brave striding toward liberal ideals even after the withdrawal of occupation armies. Let me add that I am an Austrian-born American and that I revisited Vienna not too long ago.

In 1934 Austria ceased to be a democracy. It was a one-party state with a one-party militia and a one-party salute. The martyr Dolfuss and the hero Schuschnigg were small-scale Hitlers who tolerated no opposition and built concentration camps for all those who did not see eye to eye with them.

The only difference between Austrian nazism and its Prussian counterpart was the small degree of totalitarian efficiency and planning of which the men in Vienna were capable. To say that Hitler took the country by brute force is to state a half truth. Force there was—but there was also hysterical joy of welcome.

Immediately after the anschluss there was a wave of pogroms carried on almost exclusively by Austrians. As the years of German rule went on Austrian Nazis split into two major groups: those who collaborated with the Germans in the hope of economic and political gain, and those who, disappointed in their aspirations, became proponents of their own brand of Austrian totalitarianism.

Of the latter group a good many were massacred or placed in concentration camps. As victims of nazism they had no difficulty infiltrating into Austrian public life after the liberation of the country. These men have anti-Hitler records, but their political beliefs and methods are totalitarian. Some were weeded out under denazification proceedings, but a large and powerful group survived the transition period remarkably well.

There is the all-powerful president of Austria's second largest banking institution: he survived three regimes without losing his grip on the financial world of the "little democracy." There is the official who held an important post in the office which administered looted Jewish property; today he occupies an influential position in the Austrian Ministry for Reconstruction.

There is the professor of mathematics who, in 1938, lectured to an audience of students (I among them) on the beauty of Hitlerism; he still occupies his chair at Vienna University. There is the man who in 1933 wrote the famous condemnation of democracy; today he teaches political philosophy at Vienna's Hochschule fuer Welthandel (graduate school for business).

Under the watchful eye of the occupation authorities all these men are today paying lip service to democratic ideals and they will promote an outwardly democratic regime as long as the Marshall Plan aid is needed. But there is little doubt that they will attempt to lead Austria back to the totalitarian days of Dollfuss and Schuschnigg when their time comes. Being the backbone of Austria's majority party they are today well on their way. Anybody versed in Austrian affairs knows that men like Raab, Fleischaker, Kerschagl, Kienboeck, Joham—to name only a few—can have no other objective in mind.

Perhaps your correspondent would have been less optimistic about the future of democracy in Austria if he had spoken to an eminent professor at Vienna's business school, a true liberal, who told me that he had to eliminate all discussions of democracy from his course on political science. "The students boo when I only mention the word democracy, and the dean refuses to back me up against them," he said. Or perhaps he should have spoken to a former professor of mine (another believer in democracy who left his profession in 1938). "I hope the Allies never sign the Austrian treaty," he said, "and they never leave Austria." When I asked him why, he answered, "when their troops leave my skin won't be worth a nickel."

Curing World 'Cussedness'

By Malvina Lindsay

Scientists' Diagnosis

NEXT WEEK the social scientists of the world will meet in London to discuss what they can do about the world's "cussedness." It will be almost three years to a day since the fighting of World War II stopped, or rather turned into the cold war—three years in which statesmen, diplomats, warriors have futilely sought peace.

Certainly the masses of the world are not turning toward the first International Congress on Mental Health with hopeful expectation. Few of them know such a meeting is being held. But it is possible this congress will do more toward bringing about ultimate peace than all the ceremonious meetings of generals and foreign ministers.

The 2000 or more experts on human relations from 55 nations who will attend this congress will thrash out all that has been learned about man's neuroses, aggressions and conflicts, and plan action to strike these at the roots on a scale never before attempted. That of course means that the big job will have to be done on coming generations. Results probably wouldn't begin to show up for a century.

HENCE THOSE concerned as to whether humanity will survive the next year or so are inclined to regard this congress as another of those urgent mass meetings that end up with a solemn resolution that "it all goes back" to the school, church or home.

However the London congress holds promise of something more immediate than building mental health in future generations—important as that may be. Its leaders recognize that the world will probably be in a state of tension and armed truce for a long time to come, and that experts on human behavior face an immediate obligation to help their governments keep this truce from exploding into shooting conflict.

Hence out of the meeting may come proposals that social scientists who are versed in human relations will volunteer throughout the world to aid their governments in understanding the implications of human behavior in keeping the delicate balance of peace.

Dr. John R. Rees, former director of psychiatry for the British Army, and editor of The Case of Rudolph Hess, and who is now president of the International Committee for Mental Hygiene, urges that social scientists increase their competence in the field of group social relations in order to render such service to their governments. In this they could work as teams to develop ways of eliminating misunderstanding and tensions between countries and between groups in countries. They could also serve as consultants to statesmen, executives, legislators in the way natural scientists, as physicists, now serve.

THE CONGRESS also hopes to make a frontal attack on the fear that grips the world and is one of the main threats to peace. By outlining a positive approach to peace, they hope to divert more human interest and activity to that end and away from the panic that breeds war.

Out of this Congress is expected to come a World Federation for Mental Health, probably functioning under the United Nations. Little hope is held at this time that the Soviet Union would join such an organization as the attitude of the Kremlin has been to disdain scientific knowledge of human relations. But the 55 nations represented in the congress are expected to disperse widely the great amount of information on mental health the meeting will bring out.

About 500 commissions have been studying problems of human tensions and frustrations in widely varying regions. On the basis of the information and experience collected, a world program for mental health will be set up. The general enlightenment on human problems it will bring is bound to have some immediate effect even on the hardened adults who are running the present messy and dangerous world.

Secret Intelligence

Alleged facts being revealed in the current Senate anti-American hearings should stress a lesson we apparently have not learned. In the flush of wartime alliances, we tend to consider every ally a permanent and eternal friend.

Of all organizations, our intelligence agencies should know better. A secret intelligence service has nothing but potential enemies.

From what one reads and hears, it would seem that during the last war our secret intelligence agencies gave hospitality to executive agents of other powers with the naive expectation of loyal exchange of secrets. In such a situation it would have been possible for intelligence to have included propaganda.

By most of the secret intelligence services of the world it is considered standard operational procedure to penetrate the system of both friend and enemy. Apparently by none except our own was the foreign operative welcomed within the bosom of the family. It is hoped that those responsible for the gathering of intelligence by secret means will see that those means will remain secret, not only to other Americans but to foreign friend and potential enemy alike.

GOP Forbearance

By Mark Sullivan

Foreign Policy Remains Unified

FOR UNDERSTANDABLE reasons, including a reticence which the most responsible leaders in Congress and of the Republican Party enforce upon themselves, the impression made by this special session of Congress and its intended early ending, is superficial and incorrect. It is not that congressional and Republican leaders are so much angry at President Truman as in despair about him.

Sullivan

The surface picture which portrays Congress as angry at President Truman because he called them back to Washington in hot weather, and because he denounced the body, and as further angry because he called the special session in a spirit of and for the purpose of partisan politics—all that is true enough so far as it goes. But Congress and the Republicans would regard that sort of thing as the give-and-take of politics.

What deeply concerns the Republican leaders, what they regard as their highest obligation, is the need for national unity in the face of the foreign situation. The Republican position on this, formulated on the highest level of party leadership, is in a statement given out July 24 by Governor Dewey in consultation with Republican Senator Vandenberg and Governor Dewey's adviser on foreign affairs, Mr. John Foster Dulles. They were soberly aware of what they were doing; they devoted three painstaking hours to composing the statement. What they renounced was as important as what they pledged:

"The Berlin situation is critical . . . The present duty of Americans is not to be divided by past lapses, but to unite to surmont present dangers. We shall not allow domestic partisan irritations to divert us from this indispensable unity."

WHAT PUTS the Republican leaders in despair about President Truman is the course followed by him which shows either a lack of adequate concern about unity or lack of comprehension of the effects of his actions. It is the sober conviction of men in Washington who are at once the best informed and the most poised in temperament that the danger of war with Russia is at least 50-50. It is this condition that determines the course of Republican leaders.

In this condition President Truman, by his call for a special session and the manner of it creates division between himself and Congress and between himself and the Republicans. Adding to his provocativeness he blames Congress and the Republicans for inflation. As put by the Democratic platform, often repeated in equivalent words by Mr. Truman: "The Republican Eightieth Congress is directly responsible . . . for high cost of living," that is, for inflation.

NOW EVERY Republican in Congress is conscious that they enacted two measures which make for inflation because they involve immense Government expenditures and divert industry from production of goods for domestic consumption—the vastly increased appropriations for national defense and the likewise vast appropriations for the European Recovery Program.

The Republican Congress passed these measures knowing that they increased the danger of inflation. They balanced this danger with the foreign danger, decided that the latter was the greater and were thereby forced to increase the former.

The Republican Congress did this at the request of President Truman, in willing and complete support of the foreign program laid down by the Truman Administration, and in the spirit of unity in face of the foreign threat. Now, President Truman puts blame on the Republican Congress for inflation without a single mention of the inflationary acts and that they were his own program.

If the Republicans, and Congress, were to defend themselves from Mr. Truman's charge of responsibility for inflation, they must defend the inflationary measures, increased military appropriations and the European Recovery Program. To defend these would bring up foreign relations in Congress during the presidential campaign. A "who-done-it" debate on inflation might become a "who-done-it" debate on responsibility for our foreign crisis, and that would go angrily into actions and policies of the Truman Administration and even more the Roosevelt one. Hardly anything could be more disruptive. Avoidance of disruption would be helped by an early ending of the special session, and this the Republican leaders decided upon.

'Provisional' Greek Regime Flees Country

Athens, Aug. 6 (AP).—The "provisional government" of Markos Vafiades was reported to have fled into Albania today as Greek troops laid a 30-mile semicircle of fire around the last bit of territory held by Communist rebels.

Press dispatches said the guerillas mounted seven fierce counterattacks on the east side of the perimenter to hold open their last remaining supply route to Albania along the Aliakman River through Sliminitsa. The counterattacks against government positions on captured Amouda ridge east of the route were repulsed, a government communique said. Press reports said the guerilla "government" then crossed the border at Sliminitsa.

Reports from the front said national forces were relentlessly pursuing the rebels, whose retreating columns were being machine-gunned from the air as the American-advised troops drove to finish the two-year civil war.

Hiroshima Blamed for A-Bombing

Hiroshima, Japan, Aug. 6 (NYHT).—The dropping of an atomic bomb on Hiroshima three years ago today "was your own fault, and we hope you won't forget it," Lieut. Gen. H. C. H. Robertson, commander of British occupation forces in Japan, told the city's people today as they were trying to stage an international peace demonstration on the anniversary.

To reinforce his words, he sent a squadron of British Mustang fighter planes swooping low over the place of the ceremony. The noise drowned out the music, and the voice of a local poet reciting an ode to the stricken city, which is now pretty well rebuilt.

General Rewrote Program

General Robertson personally rewrote the program of the peace ceremony, which had been worked out by the Japanese and the local American military government team under his command here. He ruled his American subordinates out of prominent positions on the platform, and brought in an Australian parliamentary delegation which is touring Japan.

He ruled out of the program messages to the people from representatives of the American military government for Japan and the United States Eighth Army. Then he stepped up on the platform and stole the show.

Chides Japanese

After informing the people that Gen. Douglas MacArthur had sent them congratulations on their progress in rebuilding the city, General Robertson said:

"Because of the natural abilities of its citizens, Hiroshima lives again. It is evidence, I hope, that they have adopted a policy of peace and good will toward other nations, instead of their former ways of war and aggression.

"This disaster was your own fault. It was caused because you attacked other people without warning and caused great suffering. You betrayed not only the trust of the United States, who always had been friendly to you, but also the trust of the British Commonwealth peoples, who were not only your friends but your allies."

U. S., British Act to Chop Up Farben Cartel

Frankfurt, Germany, Aug. 6 (AP).—British and American authorities set out today to chop the giant I. G. Farben chemical cartel into small pieces. Their plans are intended not only to break up the billion-dollar trust, but to keep it that way.

"One of the objectives of military government in the combined economic area (Bizonia) is that the I. G. Farben empire shall not be reconstituted," an announcement said.

"The independent units that are to be established will be required to operate independently and in competition with each other in accordance with the requirements and as part of the over-all economic German industrial program."

Scores of Farben plants soon are to be offered for sale. One United States officer estimated the number at "about 50."

Sales of the properties—now split into independent units by four-power order—will be carried out by German authorities. For the time being, the sales will affect only properties in the British and American occupation zones, but French authorities have been notified and are expected to follow suit.

The action was taken by the British and Americans independently of the Russians.

"Similar procedure can be followed in the Soviet zone by parallel action if Soviet authorities so desire," the announcement said.

The new plan for control of Farben, 13 directors of which were convicted and sentenced for war crimes last week at Nuernberg, calls for:

1. Establishment of a British-American control board.

2. Creation of a six to eight-man German "I. G. Farben dispersion panel."

Decisions on breaking up the trust will be left to Germans "wherever possible."

Arabs Receive Israel Bid for Peace Parley

Cairo, Aug. 6 (AP).—Count Folke Bernadotte said tonight he had transmitted the Israeli government's bid for direct peace negotiations to the Arabs.

Returning to his Rhodes headquarters from a six-day trip to Trans-Jordan, Jerusalem, Egypt and Israel, the United Nations mediator said:

"I still am optimistic. I think the (Palestine) truce will be kept and we will finally get a solution."

Correspondents in Amman asked Trans-Jordan's King Abdullah for comment on the Jewish request for a peace conference.

Abdullah said he was concerned now with the 300,000 Arabs driven from their homes in Palestine. He added:

"No doubt we should, as we have said several times, try to find a satisfactory solution . . . Our views that we have declared before are known—peace is best."

Reports reached Tel Aviv of renewed violence in Jerusalem and on Palestine's southern front. In Jerusalem, Arab and Jewish positions engaged in a mortar duel.

The Gallup Poll

Military Ties With Europe Favored by 73 Pct. of Voters

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 6.—Public sentiment for a military alliance between the United States and the Marshall Plan nations of Europe is on the increase.

This step toward more solid unity of the Western powers in facing Russia is today approved by nearly three out of four American voters polled by the institute—an overwhelming majority.

The vote is one good indication that sentiment in the United States does not favor pulling out of Europe or returning to isolationism.

In fact, American public opinion in the wake of World War II seems to be reacting in exactly the opposite manner from World War I. Whereas after the first war there was a general desire to have as little as possible to do with Europe and her affairs, today three years after the end of the second world war sentiment runs overwhelmingly in favor of so far-reaching a step as a military alliance in peacetime with a whole group of European states.

The sounding of opinion was on the following issue:

"Do you think the United States and all the western European countries participating in the Marshall Plan should join together in a permanent military alliance—that is, agree to come to each other's defense immediately if any one of them is attacked?"

The same question was put to voters in May. The trend of sentiment follows:

| | May | TODAY |
|---|---|---|
| Favor alliance | 65% | 73% |
| Opposed | 21 | 16 |
| No opinion | 14 | 11 |

The one-sided vote in the poll is symptomatic of the fact that there is comparatively little disagreement or conflict in the minds of the American people today over foreign policy. The basic ideas of that policy—playing an active role in Europe while displaying firmness toward Russia—find widespread public support, and are causing none of the deep rifts in public opinion that Communist supporters are reported to hope they will cause.

On the explosive issue of Berlin there is virtual unanimity of American opinion. American voters have signified their willingness to see us stay in Berlin even at the risk of war with Russia. As reported last week, the Institute found in a Nation-wide poll that only 11 per cent want the United States to give up Berlin, while 80 per cent say we should remain even if it means war with Russia, and 9 per cent have no opinion.

On the issue of a military alliance with the Marshall Plan countries, Republican and Democratic voters see very much alike, with approximately 75 out of every 100 in both parties favoring such an alliance.

The followers of Henry A. Wallace, who has opposed the Marshall Plan and who favors a softer American policy toward Russia were found about evenly divided in today's poll, with a slight preponderance in favor of the military alliance.

Ouster Starts Political Row In Argentina

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Aug. 6 (U.P.).—A political storm broke today over the ouster of Ernesto Sanmartino, radical opposition leader of the Chamber of Deputies, for criticizing President Juan D. Peron.

The entire radical minority of 43 deputies took action to resign in protest. This would make Congress almost a one-party body.

Sanmartino's criticisms of a series of articles written by Peron and distributed abroad by the North American Newspaper Alliance caused the Peronist majority to appoint a special committee to decide whether Sanmartino had offended the presidential dignity.

The committee ruled that he had and the chamber voted last night, 104 to 42, to oust him.

Charging that such action contituted a "curtailment of freedom of expression," the radical minority addressed their collective resignation to chamber president Hector Campora but sent it first to the radical executive committee for approval.

If the radicals' resignations become effective, the chamber will have only two opposition deputies to face more than 100 Peronists. There is no opposition in the Senate.

The resigning deputies claimed that if a deputy could be hauled before a special committee for statements made from the floor and then expelled, it was obvious parliamentary freedom of speech no longer existed.

The majority asserted that parliamentary privileges are not a personal concession permitting any member to act without regard for the rules of social and political conduct.

Group Urges Chiang Open Party Books

Nanking, China, Aug. 6 (U.P.).—Reform-minded members of the Kuomintang (Nationalist Party) today asked President Chiang-Kai-shek to make a public report on the party's wealth.

The request was submitted in the form of a petition, asking for a public statement of the party's property and financial assets. The new demand followed a call for reorganization of China's dominant party voted yesterday by a reform caucus.

Simultaneously, 60 delegates to the recently disbanded Constitutional Assembly prepared a petition calling for a special Assembly session in an effort to limit the powers of the legislative Yuan (Parliament).

Today's action was the latest development in a growing political attack on the Conservatives under Chiang's leadership for the past 20 years.

Ewing Plans To Keep Cook

Los Angeles for 121 days during the year April, 1947, to April, 1948.

The FSA head explained that the Federal Communications Commission granted a license August 1, 1947, to Studebaker, his son and a third person for a radio station in San Diego.

The press conference had been called primarily so Ewing could explain his use of the St. Elizabeths Hospital cook for personal luncheons.

The Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor and Federal Security was told yesterday by Kelly, the cook, that he had been preparing the luncheons since last November.

Ewing told reporters he pays for the food himself. He defended the practice, declaring it saves time and money because he and his aides can talk business while they eat instead of taking time out for lunch.

Kelly told a reporter the luncheon duties do not interfere with his regular work at the hospital. He said his work at St. Elizabeths is done at 10 a. m. and doesn't begin again until 4 p. m. He said his staff has its work laid out while he is absent.

However, Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), chairman of the subcommittee investigating the use of the cook, said he does not see how the practice can be "justified."

"It's a bad practice," said Knowland, "taking the head cook of a hospital responsible for feeding more than 2000 persons, and putting him to work preparing luncheon for a handful of persons."

Knowland said the matter would be given "further attention" by Congressional committees.

Ewing last night filed a protest with the Senate Appropriations Committee relative to the manner in which committee employes caused the cook, Kelly, to leave his job for the purposes of giving testimony before a congressional committee.

In a letter addressed to Senator William F. Knowland of California, the Federal Security administrator declared:

"At the outset, I want to protest against the outrageous conduct of two of your committee's investigators yesterday. While Mr. Neaser J. Kelly, a Negro cook, was finishing the preparation of lunch for six members of the administrator's staff and myself, two of your investigators, who gave their names as Graves and Sanborn, forced their way into the kitchen in this building and compelled Mr. Kelly to accompany then immediately and appear before your committee. Mr. Kelly was not even given the ordinary courtesy of permission to put on his regular clothes or get his hat. Furthermore, he was denied permission to talk to anyone. This action represents an outrageous use of totalitarian police methods against an unoffending Government employe. It was wholly unnecessary because you well know that whenever your committee desires the presence of any employe of this agency, it need only advise us and the person in question will be on hand."

Expenses, Palace

Italians Back President's $21,000 Pay

By Barrett McGurn

Rome, Aug. 6 (NYHT).—The Italian Parliament overrode objections tonight that $300,000 is too large an annual expense account for the President of this 2-year-old republic.

The Parliament agreed also the President should have one 1000-room former royal palace, a 10,000-acre shooting lodge, and a salary of $21,000.

A debate on the proper amount of pomp which should surround a republic's president preceded the unanimous vote.

Although the presidency in Italy is largely a ceremonial position, its occupant will receive far more than the man who actually runs the government.

Premier de Gasperi's salary is $56 a week. De Gasperi lives in the same teeming unpainted middle-class apartment house flat which he occupied while he was still being persecuted by his predecessor, Mussolini.

Cabinet ministers in Italy get $38 a week.

The President's principal function is to name a new Prime Minister when Parliament overthrows one.

Luigi Einaudi, elected Italy's first President, two months ago, was occupying a middle-class 10-room house on the unfashionable outskirts of Rome prior. The 1000-room Quirinal Palace, which he now occupies as President, was the main residence of all Italy's kings since 1870.

Camp Hull Springs Held 'Investment'

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

Camp Hull Springs, about 100 miles southeast of Washington at Erica, Va., is an example of the growing program of community work carried on by downtown churches.

The camp, on a branch of the Potomac River, is operated under the community activities program of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

To Mrs. James D. Ford, director of social welfare of the church and camp director, the camp is an "investment in human personality."

Mrs. Ford, who is known to campers and staff alike as "Mom," explained that few of the 120 children who spend part of each summer at the camp are members of the Massachusetts ave. church.

Boys and girls come instead from the congested area which surrounds the church. They learn about the camp through the year-round program of community activities at the church or through interested individuals or groups. A few, not from the immediate area, are sent because they need the camp experience.

To most of these kids camping and outdoor life is an entirely new experience. Mrs. Ford told of one lad who was fascinated by the trees there.

Finally he asked a staff member who had planted them. It was inconceivable to him that no one had to set out each tree in the woods as they do in the city.

The camp schedule is filled with activities—swimming, baseball, duties, handicraft work, worship and study. Mrs. Ford explained, however, that the religious program is not compulsory, that not all of the children are Methodists and the camp staff is not attempting to make them members of that denomination.

To children from the crowded downtown area the very regularity of the camp program is an innovation. Many of them have been allowed to come and go as they please. At Hull Springs they learn regular habits of work and play.

Camp Hull Springs was made possible through the interest of W. P. Ames, a friend of Mount Vernon Place pastor Dr. John W. Rustin. He donated use of his farm to the church and constructed a frame camp building on the grounds.

Individuals, groups and classes at the church finance the summer of fresh air for the kids who go there. Some of the children earn part of their camp money by shining shoes or doing odd jobs. Parents, hard-pressed as they may be, contribute when able.

Young people from the church act as staff members at Hull Springs. In addition to a director, associate director and cook, there is one counselor for each eight children.

Members of the church drive the kids to camp on Saturday mornings, with particular church classes often taking over the duty.

Once the camping season is over, the boys and girls are not forgotten, Mrs. Ford pointed out. Reports on their summer are sent to parents and schools, and the church encourages them to join in the winter program in the community activities building.

Extension Tests Held in 6 Languages

Final examinations were written in six languages by students at an overseas extension session of the Seventh Day Adventist Theological Seminary, Takoma Park, Md.

The school, first of its kind in the denomination, was conducted by three members of the Takoma Park seminary faculty at Newbold Missionary College, near London, England. Sixty-seven Adventist ministers from 14 countries in Europe and Africa attended the sessions.

Elder Leroy E. Froom, Takoma Park, one of the men who conducted the school, said that for many there it was the first meeting with fellow ministers since before the war.

He declared there was "a striking absence of national consciousness or racial prejudice" among the pastors and executives.

The clergymen crowded a full quarter's work in archaeology, evangelistic methods and historic development of prophetic interpretation into the six-week session.

Seminary officials are planning to conduct similar extension schools in other parts of the world. Dr. Holger Lindsjo and Elder John L. Shuler were associated with Elder Froom in conducting the extension school.

D. C. Pay Hike Bill Dead, Dirksen Says

House District Committee Chairman Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.) said yesterday that legislation for District workers' pay raises at this session of Congress was officially dead.

The Congressman, after conferring with Senators Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) and Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), declared, when asked about his bill for the pay boosts, "it's dead."

He explained that Senator Cain turned thumbs down on his proposal for a Federal loan to finance the raises, saying that it might hurt the chances of enacting a District sales tax later.

Representative Dirksen said he felt the House of Representatives would have passed the bill, but added, "It takes two bodies to enact legislation."

"It's no use trying to press this bill or any other on this matter any further," Dirksen concluded.

New Pipeline To Boost Gas Supply Here

The Federal Power Commission yesterday granted the Potomac Gas Company authority to build an 18-mile pipeline to increase gas supplies for the District.

The company, a subsidiary of the Washington Gas Light Co., was granted temporary permission to begin construction, pending a final decision from the commission. The 16-inch pipeline will be built from a point of connection with the 20-inch pipeline of the Virgina Gas Transmission Corp., near Dranesville, Va., to Arlington, a.

Potomac Gas Co., estimated that the line would cost $1,200,000 and would be completed in about three months. Of its peak-day capacity of 30 million cubic feet, one half would be delivered in Virginia and the other half in the District.

Hagerstown Girl Wins 4-H Fashion Show

Jane McCauley, 15-year-old 4-H Club member from Hagerstown, Md., won first prize yesterday in a fashion show of home-made dresses, held on the Maryland University campus in connection with Maryland's twenty-sixth annual 4-H Club Week.

Competing with 60 other county sewing champions, the Hagerstown girl won with a ruffled, off-the-shoulder white chiffon evening gown which she said cost her $15.50.

She will compete with other State winners at the national 4-H Congress in Chicago in December.

The style show was one of the final events in a State-wide 4-H Club gathering attended by 1100 boys and girls this week in College Park, Md. The meeting officially ends today.

Other fashion winners yesterday were: Frances Curtis, 14, Ellicott City, second prize with a club uniform which cost $3.50; Joyce Rinehart, 15, Westminster, third prize with a two-piece school dress which cost $3, and Hazel G. Newnam, 19, Kent County, fourth prize with a plaid school dress which cost $4.25.

Earlier yesterday, plaques for "outstanding contributions" to 4-H work, were presented to O. K. Quivey, Baltimore agricultural agent for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and Philip C. Turner, Parkton, chairman of the Maryland State Fair Board and past president of the Maryland Farm Bureau. Both men have helped provide awards and scholarships for 4-H members.

Forty-nine of the youthful leaders were initiated into the State chapter of the 4-H All-Stars.

The group is composed of 4-H Boys and Girls who have compiled exceptional records in club work and who have excelled in "leadership, character and service."

Larchmont, N. Y., Aug. 6 (AP).—Edgar Schenckman, former head of the orchestral department at the Julliard School of Music, said today he will leave shortly after Labor Day to become conductor of the Norfolk Symphony Orchestra.

Dr. H. H. Long, Educator, 60, Plans to Quit

Dr. Long

Dr. Howard H. Long, 60, psychologist and associate District school superintendent in charge of educational research, will retire the end of this month, the Board of Education announced yesterday.

Dr. Long has been giving and evaluating group achievement and personality tests to students in divisions 10 through 13 of the District schools for 24 years. Since 1926, he also has been chief examiner for Negro schools in the District, responsible for the hiring of teachers, clerks and truant officers.

Prominent in civic work, Dr. Long has been a member of the budget committee of the Community Chest for 12 years, and is on the board of directors of the Family Service Association and the District Tuberculosis Association. He is on the national executive committee of the Young Men's Christian Association and is chairman of the management committee of the 12th st. YMCA.

Born in News Ferry, Va., Dr. Long attended Virginia Union University and was graduated in 1915 from Howard University. He received his master's degree in psychology from Clark University in 1916 and later, in 1933, his doctorate from Harvard University.

From 1916 to 1917 Dr. Long taught psychology at Howard University, then served in France as a first lieutenant in the Infantry during World War I.

From 1919 to 1923, he was dean of Paine College, in Georgia, served a year as dean at Knoxville College, and then came to the District as a psychology teacher at Miner Normal School in 1924.

Four months later he became acting director of research for Negro schools in the District. In 1925 he was made assistant superintendent.

The psychologist, who lives with his wife at 1112 Girard st. nw., will become daministrative dean of the Educational and Industrial College in Xenia, Ohio, in September.

Dog Rescues Boy

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

PERKING UP—Jerry Lee Huffman, 3, recovers in hospital bed after his collie dog early yesterday led his father and a neighbor to the cornfield fence a mile and a half from his home at Philo, Ohio, where he was trapped all night. Naked—he had left his clothes at home—and almost unconscious from exposure to cold, insects and poison ivy, the boy was so tightly enmeshed in wire and wild grapevines he couldn't move. He apparently had been on his hands and knees all night. More than 200 persons hunted him.

Housing Bill Eases Assured Loan Provisos

Minus any public housing and slum clearance features, the McCarthy housing bill passed by the Senate yesterday revises Titles 2 and 6 of the National Housing Act to encourage more construction of low cost homes.

Some of its provisions:

Guarantee private loans up to 90 per cent of the cost of large scale rental projects with individual units costing $8100, and bar aid to those refusing to admit families with children. Makes 800 million dollars available for such guarantees.

Authorize FHA loan guarantees up to 95 per cent on homes costing $6300 or less.

Raise from $3000 to $4500 the ceiling on houses eligible for up to 90 per cent low-cost-housing. Title 1 loan guarantees, and increase the amount available for these guarantees by 35 million dollars.

Permit insured construction loans of up to 90 per cent on projects of at least 25 family units costing $7500 or less each.

Provide a secondary market through FNMA for 50 per cent instead of 25 per cent of all veterans' guaranteed mortgages or FHA insured mortgages made after April 30 of this year.

Assure a profit of 2¾ per cent on equity investments in large-scale rental properties with low unit rental terms.

Create a new division in the Housing and Finance Agency to work for standardization of building codes and materials.

The revised TEW bill, rejected by the Senate, carried all of these provisions plus public housing, slum clearance, rural housing and veterans' homestead features.

Congress Near Adjournment

to rubber stamp the House bill, however. It struck completely from the House measure a provision requiring a sharp increase in Federal Reserve Bank gold reserves. Tobey called it a "fraud" and Administration sources said it might have had a disastrous effect on the now Federal Reserve-supported Government bond market. Only Senator John W. Bricker (R., Ohio) voted for it.

The committee then revised the remaining two provisions in the House measure, bank credit and consumer buying controls.

It recommended the Federal Reserve Board be authorized to increase member bank reserves on demand deposits 5 per cent and on time deposits by 2 per cent. The House bill provided increases of 3 and 1 per cent respectively. The President had recommended much tighter bank credit, with reserves increased 10 and 4 per cent in these categories.

The consumer credit control feature of the House bill was made a longer range proposition. The House voted to reimpose the installment buying authority until next March 31. The committee recommended an extension to June 30, 1949.

Almost Another Upset

The committee narrowly missed another upset. An amendment by Senator Homer E. Capehart (R., Ind.), freezing all prices at present levels, was defeated by a 5-to-5 tie.

Actually, the House-passed bill was never referred to the Senate committee. Tobey's group brought in its proposed changes in the form of amendments which the Senate will vote up or down.

At least a fight for the President's price measures was promised when Senate Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley (Ky.) introduced an amendment embracing all the Truman inflation control points, with some modification of price rollback provisions.

Barkley called a full conference of Democratic Senators this morning to rally strength for tougher controls.

Taft Makes Prediction

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) at variance again with the Senate Banking Committee, took the floor late in the day for the House credit curb bill.

He argued dangerous deflation could result if Congress clamped on too many drastic controls. Taft said higher prices are not inevitable, that without controls there is a leveling off in some commodities now and "there is a very fair hope this economy may be stabilized."

Taft told the Senate he was willing to wager the Federal Reserve Board would not use the House-voted authority to increase reserves on demand deposits 3 per cent, much less the 5 per cent increase the Senate committe proposed.

Taft also supported the Administration-opposed House gold provision, increasing from 25 to 35 per cent the gold reserves Federal Reserve Banks are required to hold against deposits, and from 25 to 50 per cent the gold reserves against currency.

Taft said the effect would be "more psychological than anything else," but Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), warning of its possible effect on Government bonds, said it was "playing with fire."

Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), chairman of the Democratic National Committee, meantime called on Governor Dewey to come out for strong anti-inflation legislation while Congress is in session or "surrender any moral right to speak about high prices during the campaign.

"If Governor Dewey keeps silent and permits this Congress to go home without enacting a workable anti-inflation program, it will be the most expensive silence in American history," McGrath said.

Wheat Pact Sidetracked

Even before the Senate knocked down the T-E-W bill, Senate committees called time on another Truman proposal.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee unanimously approved the international wheat marketing agreement, reported it to the Senate, but asked that action go over until the next session of Congress. Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) said there is no point in joining the agreement unless Britain, Australia, New Zealand, Ireland and Denmark return. He said the committee's action kept the agreement alive and evidenced official American interest to any countries wanting to join.

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan voiced disappointment and said these points are now obvious:

"First, there will be no wheat agreement for this year's large crop. Second, the proposal will have to be renegotiated. Third, further negotiations will have to be negotiated with the United States being in a much less advantageous position than when the proposed agreement was signed."

Barkley Hits "Ultimatum"

Senate burial of the T-E-W bill, and passage of the limited aids to private builders, came on a split party vote after a bitter debate.

Senator Taft, original author of the long-range housing bill, set the pace for the Senate reversal. He still promised to push for enactment next session, but said the limited legislation was better than no legislation at all. Even if a House-Senate conference on the legislation was possible, he said nothing more than the limited bill would come out of it.

Senator Barkley immediately accused Taft of "surrendering" his position "because of conviction, expediency or at the point of a shotgun."

Like Tobey, Barkley hit the House leadership "ultimatum" that no housing legislation would pass if the Senate again approved public housing and slum clearance provisions. He said they were "denying their own members the right to vote" and asked the Senate "not to be intimidated."

Lucas Says Taft Retreats

Senate Democratic Whip Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) also accused Taft of "retreat" and demanded Governor Dewey make his own position clear before the vote.

Senator Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.), who joined Tobey in the Senate Banking Committee bolt that forced the T-E-W bill before the Senate, said he refused to believe that House leaders would refuse to send the bill to conference.

"The implications on the part of the House would be so serious that they would not dare face those implications," Flanders said.

The turning point came when Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.), a strong advocate of public housing and slum clearance, threw his weight behind Taft's position.

Ives Asks Realism

Ives appealed to the Senate to be "realistic" if it wanted to get some workable housing measure on the books.

"For us to stand on our constitutional rights and insist on our prerogatives to pass the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill would be a grave mistake at this time," he argued.

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) asked Ives if he spoke for Governor Dewey. Ives said he spoke only for himself, that he hadn't discussed the proposed housing legislation with Dewey. He said Governor Dewey's record on public housing "speaks for itself."

The showdown came on a substitute for the T-E-W bill offered by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) approved by a Senate Banking Subcommittee and acceptable to both House and Senate GOP leaders. Eleven Democrats, mostly from the South, voted with 37 Republicans to substitute the McCarthy bill. Twelve Republicans and 24 Democrats voted "No."

Americans Continue Sweep of Cups in Swimming, Diving

By Charles A. Grumich

Olympic Pool, Wembley, England, Aug. 6 (AP).—An American sweep of all men's Olympic swimming and diving events loomed tonight after six straight victories as the United States women celebrated Mrs. Vicki Manalo Draves' double diving win and a record-breaking performance by their Olympic championship 400-meter relay team.

This might well, in fact, be set down in Olympic annals as All-America Day at the big poolhouse. It went like this:

Mrs. Draves, petite, brunette beauty from Pasadena, Calif., won the women's platform diving, becoming the first woman to take both the Olympic's high and springboard diving championships. She won the springboard event Tuesday.

The American girl swimmers, after failing to win a title in their first three final races, saved themselves from a shutout by taking the women's 400-meter free style relay in Olympic record time of 4:29.2 — almost seven seconds under the well-battered 1936 mark.

Terrific Anchor Leg

Ann Curtis, the tall 22-year-old blonde from San Francisco and the University of California, kicked the United States girl relayers home ahead of the favored Danish and Dutch women with an anchor leg win over Danish Fritze Nathansen Carstensen in sensational fashion.

Unofficial poolside timers caught Miss Curtis at 1:04.2 for her 100-meter sprint, considerably under the women's world record, set by a Dutch girl named Willi Van Ouden at Amsterdam 12 years ago. There was no official timing of Miss Curtis however.

The Americans who won gold medals for the relay, besides Miss Curtis, were Marie Corridon of Norwalk, Conn., Thelma Kalama, an Hawaiian from Honolulu, and Brenda Helser of Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Denmark second, Holland third and Britain, fourth, all beat the Olympic relay record of 4:36 set by the Dutch at Berlin in 1936.

Allen Stack of Hingham, Mass., 20-year-old captain of Yale's swim team, scored the fourth straight American men's water race victory by winning the 100-meter Olympic backstroke final.

Ensign Robert Cowell of the United States Navy and Pittsburgh was second, and Georges Vallery, the European champion from France, third.

Verdeur Seems Cinch

As it stands now the Americans have won the men's 100 and 400 meter free style with Wally Ris of the University of Iowa in the 100, and Hawaiian Bill Smith in the 400. Both set records, as did the 800-meter relay team. Stack's backstroke triumph was the fourth in a race, but counting the two diving titles it is six straight.

Points Total 7139; Frenchman Second; Dutch Woman Stars

By Gayle Talbot

Olympic Stadium, Wembley, England, Aug. 6 (AP).—Bob Mathias, 17-year-old giant from Tulare, Calif., won the Olympic decathlon championship in semi-darkness late tonight to become the youngest individual winner in the history of the games.

Only a few dim bulbs lighted this vast stadium and fewer than 200 diehards remained of the 60,000 fans who had sat through the day's rainy program when the amazing Coast youngster wound up his two-day effort with a clean victory over the 28 rivals which lasted through the 10 events.

There were no floodlights to lift the gloom of the Olympic arena, and the 6-foot, 198-pound high school hero completed his final three events—the pole vault, javelin throw and 1500-meter run—in virtual obscurity. Most of his opponents had left the place hours before.

Ninth Victory in Track

Mathias, who had stood in third place overnight in the exhausting test, went into the lead in the seventh event, the discus throw, and never was headed. The final tabulation gave him 7139 points against 6974 for the runner-up, a 24-year-old Frenchman named Ignace Heinrich.

The victory was the ninth scored by America's track and field forces, as compared to four for second place Sweden.

Considering the miserable weather conditions, Mathias' point total was regarded as excellent, though far below the Olympic record of 7900 set by Glenn Morris of the United States at Berlin in 1936.

America's superboy outstripped his field in only one event, the discus where he had a toss of 144 feet 4 inches, but he tied with three others for first in the high jump, and with his teammate, Irving (Moon) Mondschein of New York University, for top honors in the pole vault. He was adequate in the other seven tests.

Floyd Simmons Third

Floyd Simmons, former football and track star at the University of North Carolina, finished third with 6950 points. Enrique Kistenmacher of the Argentine, leader at the end of the first day, was fourth with 6929, Eric Andersson of Sweden fifth with 6877, and Peter Mullins of Australia sixth with 6739.

Mondchein, the two-time United States champion who served as captain of the United States trio although he lost his national title to Mathias this year, wound up in eighth place with 6175 points.

Earlier in the day, a 30-year-old Dutch housewife and a 28-year-old fireman from Gavle, Sweden, wrote their names large on the pages of Olympic history as the track and field events of the 1948 games rushed toward their conclusion.

Mrs. Fannie Blankers-Koen, a tall, thin-faced Amsterdam matron, became the first triple winner of her sex when she spread-eagled a field of six finalists in the women's 200-meter run. She previously had won the 100 meters and 80-yard hurdles.

Eriksson Outruns Strand

Henri Eriksson, following in the footsteps of a long line of illustrious Swedish runners, out-footed and out-gamed his famous countryman, Lennart Strand, in the stretch to win the final of the classic 1500 meters over a track glistening with water.

Strand, exhausted, barely saved second place from the closing onrush of Willi Slijkhuis of Holland.

Two crack American relay teams made up largely of stalwarts who have helped Uncle Sam to pile up nine first places in track and field, scored easy victories in their heats of the 400 and 1600-meter team events, to be decided tomorrow.

The dash team, with Barney Ewell, Lorenzo Wright, Harrison Dillard and Mel Patton flashing fourth in that order, looked like a cinch to capture a tenth championship as it beat a surprisingly good Italian combination in the first of three heats.

Coach Dean Cromwell's quarter-milers also romped their heat of the 1600 meters, but no one tonight was too complacent about their chances of beating the Jamaicans in the final. The race between the two crack relay teams should cupply the highlight of tomorrow's concluding track and field program.

The American quartet, composed of Roy Cochran, winner of the 400-meter hurdles; Mal Whitfield, Olympic 800 metes champ; Cliff Bourland, 200 meters finalist, and Arthur Harnden of Texas A. & M., won its heat in 3 minutes, 12.6 seconds. Italy again was second.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

WHEN JOE KUHEL, in the West with a losing Washington ball club, flew into a pet and blamed the umpires for a lot of his troubles—like a flash it came to me I had heard the story before, and it wasn't original with Kuhel.

POVICH

Riffling through my prodigious memory, I tracked it down. You know how those things are. Something sticks in your mind and you are restless until you come up with the source. There was more than something faintly old-hat in what Kuhel said about the umpires, how he charged they were rubbing it in on the Washington club.

Kuhel's charges were incisive, but to these sensitive ears they did not seem to have the ring of originality and for three days I wrestled with my fund of memories to nail the same complaint to a previous Washington manager, and then—Eureka!

I can now report that Kuhel's complaint against the umpiring, and much of his language in support of that charge, was a dead steal from my old friend, Gus Schmelz, who like Kuhel, once was managing a losing Washington club in the West.

I FORGET now on which newspaper I was working at the time, because it was a long time ago, 1894 to be exact, and there's even a chance I wasn't even born by that year, but I know that Schmelz set the pace for Kuhel. In fact, Kuhel's was a mild beef against the umpiring, compared to the statement the red-bearded Schmelz issued in Cincinnati 54 years ago under much the same circumstances.

Washington was in the old 12-club National League in those days and Manager Schmelz was having no luck either with the umpires or his ball players, so he hauled off and said to a Cincinnati sports writer:

"Simply because we are tail-enders the umpires think they have license to rob us. If we had anything like a square deal we would be up alongside the third-place Brooklyns instead of our present place in the race. We have been sand-bagged, skinned and robbed on every hand. Umps have taken games away from us with every team except Baltimore. There they had no chance to rob us for the Baltimores played so much better ball."

He also said, "We have had nothing but hard luck and the usual run of villainously bad umpiring that always falls to the lot of the tail ender." It's all in The Washington Post's files of 1894.

KUHEL'S squawk has gotten him nothing, not even the support of Clark Griffith, his employer, who amazes me by passing up this chance to land with both feet on his old enemies, the umpires. Griffith brushes the whole issue off by defending the umpires as an honorable group and declaring his players, apparently including Kuhel, "are imagining things."

Anybody knows Kuhel can't win. If the umpires choose to rub it in on his men for daring to bring the charges that netted Umpire Bill McGowan a 10-day suspension and $500 fine, there's nothing Kuhel or the Nats can do about it. The umpires have so much arbitrary power they can rub it in under the guise of that infallibility, "umpire's judgment," with full support of the league, and fie on their critics.

This isn't to say that the umpires don't rub it in sometimes. They do. They're a thin-skinned bunch with radar ears that pick up every crack from the players' bench, and they react like anybody else would. Unlike other folks who are moved only by the temptation, they have both the temptation and the opportunity to give guys the works.

Perhaps it wasn't wise for Kuhel to bring the charges anyway. As I was saying, he can't win, and he's risking that his Nats will be labelled "cry babies," as were the Cleveland Indians a few years ago when they went bawling to higher authority to get Manager Oscar Vitt fired. The label stuck with the Indians for many years and they weren't rid of it until they cleaned house.

It's a surprising charge that Kuhel makes anyway—saying he's getting the works from the umpires because the Washington Club's temerity in demanding and getting McGowan suspended. The bald truth is that McGowan himself is not popular with a certain group of umpires and they scarcely wept over the news that he was being sat on by League President Harridge.

Other umpires rated higher in league politics than McGowan did, and any little thing that came to pass to deflate Mr. McGowan would have been joyfully received by them. As long as McGowan operated in the league, the trouble with him as other umpires saw it, was that he was out in front by a country mile as the best umpire in the league.

Detroit, Aug. 6.—When a base hit would have meant the ball game for them tonight, the Tigers were unable to get one.

What they received instead was just as good—a walk from Walter Masterson with the bases loaded which returned them a 1-0 victory over the Nats in 10 innings.

Masterson's pass to Hoot Evers forced Paul Campbell over with the winning run and brought Ted Gray, 23-year-old local product, his first victory as a starter for the Tigers.

Gray, a fast-balling left-hander, restricted the punchless Nats to six singles and struck out seven of them. Masterson, dropping his eighth decision against seven successes, was nicked for eight singles, also, two of them infield taps which set up the decisive run.

Rally Under Way

With 29,488 customers prepared to witness a second overtime inning, First Baseman George Vico beat out an infield hit with two away in the tenth. George Kell legged out another infield dribbler to second.

After walking Vic Wertz to load the bases, Masterson hitched up his belt and threw a strike by Hoot Evers. He was off the beam on the next four pitches, however, and Campbell, running for Vico, strolled in with the tally that ended Detroit's four-game losing streak and at the same time extended Washington's latest series of reversals to four.

The Nats had several great opportunities to score, but, as usual, they let each get away from them.

In the first inning they threatened to chase Gray, with runners on first and second and only one away. Tom McBride got the youngster out of that jam, however, by rolling into a double play.

In the sixth the Griffs reared up again, but once more nothing came of it. With Len Okrie on second and Eddie Yost on first with only one away, Kozar dropped a single into right field, a hit which could have spelled disaster for the Tigers, but which turned out to be a blessing.

Okrie held up at third, and when Yost rounded second and headed for third, Okrie tried to score, but was nabbed in a rundown. Carden Gillenwater left Yost on second by striking out.

N. Y. Feud Gives Charles, Bivins Boost

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter.

Although the wise boys scoffed the fight never would come off, events yesterday practically assured the twice-postponed Ezzard Charles-Jimmy Bivins meeting at Griffith Stadium, September 13.

Furthermore, it appeared that Matchmaker Gabe Menendez had a better chance to put across an astounding parlay and book the winner of the fight with Jersey Joe Walcott in a heavyweight title bout at the ball park here October 5.

Another flareup in New York's boxing war made the September fight definite and the championship fight a less remote possibility.

Twentieth Century Sporting Club yesterday announced it would buck the Tournament of Champions' title double-header at Ebbets Field September 23 by signing Lightweight Champion Ike Williams to defend his title against Jesse Flores of Stockton, Calif., at Yankee Stadium, September 22.

Only a week ago, Sol Strauss, acting promoter for the ailing Jacobs, flatly stated that he expected to fill his September 22 Yankee Stadium date by matching Jersey Joe Walcott and Ezzard Charles.

But the recalcitrant Jake Mintz, Charles' manager, finally was forced to keep his original commitment for the Variety Club benefit here or face NBA suspension.

Menendez, matchmaker here for Mrs. Florence Turner, announced yesterday that he will meet with Felix Bocchicchio, Walcott's adviser, in Camden on Monday.

Bocchicchio already has indicated his willingness to have Walcott fight the Charles-Bivins winner here in October for $60,000, or 27½ per cent of the gate. His only stipulation is that the fight must be for the heavyweight championship of the world.

4th Change In National This Season

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 6 (AP).—Johnny Neun, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, was released tonight and Bucky Walters, one-time pitching great, was named as leader for the remainder of the season.

Neun has been with the Reds for the past year and a half. The club recently has had a losing streak but defeated the league-leading Boston Braves three out of four games in a ser : that ended only last night.

It was at Walters' own suggestion that his appointment be only for the remainder of the season.

Neun is the fourth National League leader to be dropped this year. On Friday, July 16, Ben Chapman was ousted at Philadelphia only a few hours after Mel Ott's release as boss of the New York Giants was announced.

Leo Durocher was shipped to the Giants by Brooklyn and Burt Shotton was recalled from semi-retirement to direct the Dodgers.

The Reds have won 44 and lost 56 under Neun this season. Much was expected of them but the entire team showed the effects of an injury to Ewell Blackwell, generally rated the loop's best pitcher.

Neun came to the Reds after directing the New York Yankees for a short period at the close of 1946. Prior to that he had bossed Yankee farms at Newark and Kansas City. He started his managerial career at Akron, Ohio, in 1935.

As a player Neun was with Detroit and the Boston Nationals as a first baseman. While at Detroit he gained fame for an unassisted triple play against Cleveland on May 31, 1927.

Walters came to the Philadelphia Phillies as an infielder and was remodeled into a pitcher there. He was traded to the Reds in 1938. There he and Paul Derringer pitched the club to National League pennants in 1939 and 1940. The Reds also won the World Series in 1940. Walters pitching a pair of victories.

The announcement of Neun's release was made prior to tonight's game between the Reds and Dodgers at Ebbets Field.

Walters' Debut Spoiled by Bums

Brooklyn, Aug. 6 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers spoiled the managerial debut of Bucky Walters tonight as young Rex Barney pitched the Dodgers to a 4-1 three-hit triumph over the Cincinnati Reds. Jackie Robinson socked a two-run homer for the Dodgers. Barney fanned nine for his ninth victory.

Mathias, a Man-Sized Barefoot Boy, Risks Decathlon Title in 1952 'If I Can Rest Up'

LONDON, Aug. 6 (U.P.).—A California high school boy plodded through mud puddles toward the stadium locker room tonight.

Robert Mathias, only 17, of Tulare, Calif., dragged his 6-foot 2-inch frame towards a locker room bed and rest.

The world would read about him in tomorrow morning's newspapers. They would read that the husky schoolboy became Olympic decathlon champion. The youngest athlete in history to gain the title.

But tonight Bob just didn't have enough energy left to care.

"I never worked so long and so hard for anything in my life," he panted.

"Will you try to keep your title in the 1952 games?" he was asked.

Mathias wasn't too tired to grn as he answered: "Maybe, if I am rested up by that time."

Mathias began this grueling day with a steak for breakfast at 8 a. m. At 10:30 he started with 29 other contestants for the 110-meter hurdles—first of five events on the day's program.

Exactly 12 hours after the start of the hurdles, the young Californian began final event, 1500-meter grind.

It was a weird spectacle, witnessed by his parents, two brothers and only a few hundred spectators, officials and sports writers.

There were no floodlights, only weak stadium illumination. Spectators moved from their seats to the track rim. Even the ushers and gate keepers had gone home.

It looked more like a night baseball game in a Class "D" league than a mighty Olympic spectacle. A field announcer said in tired English voice "Will it ever end?"

Three figures moved across backstretch silhouetted by stadium lights. Only when they passed blazing torch could their numbers or faces be distinguished. Sweden's E. P. Andersson was leading.

Mathias' long arms swung listlessly. He frequently dropped his head toward the ground as if looking for track.

This game youngster had hurdled, thrown the discus, pole vaulted, and hurled the javelin in miserable weather varying between light and heavy showers throughout the day. Between events he stretched on the ground, wrapped in blankets and raincoats or went to the locker room for a rubdown. For lunch he had only the usual sandwiches in box lunch. By evening he was too tired to eat.

He pole vaulted in semidarkness; he tossed the javelin into almost total darkness using a flashlight to see markers for his run.

Now bulldoggedly he pushed himself toward the end of the 1500 meters. For a moment he looked too tired but pulled himself together and made it. His time was 5 minutes 11 seconds, guaranteeing victory.

He stumbled off sickly from the orange colored track toward the stands and his mother. She was crying and laughing at the same time as she hugged him. Bob smiled, patted her on the back, and said "I'm a little tired, Mom."

Then the boy became a man again, returning to the track with the remainder of competitors. With his older brother, he walked barefoot across the green, watersodden infield.

Where 62,000 had watched from the huge stadium, now only a handful of spectators and sports writers watched the giant youngster walk past the Olympic dais.

Someone yelled from the darkness of the stands, "Hooray, Mathias." Bob turned tiredly and waved.

Where did he get the energy?

His blonde, comely mother, Mrs. Lily Mathias, told newsmen, "Bob has perfect relaxation. He can fall asleep in 10 minutes, any place, any time."

Evicted Thespis Ogles Ninth St.

By Richard L. Coe

THE STREET OF THE BROKEN HEADS: 84-year-old Marcus Notes was in town yesterday from his home in Baltimore, pondering what to do about rental offers for his two Ninth st. theaters, the Strand and the Roosevelt. . . The latter is suitable only for movies, but the Strand once was the Academy of Music, opened in 1888. . . It's been a "grind" movie house for some years now, but Notes and his younger son, Sylvan, both claim it could be converted to suitable condition for stage plays if someone came along with a bona fide offer. . . "We've been doing a lot of talking lately," says the younger Notes, "but what we're after is a concrete offer." . . . He's expecting one Monday some ANTA people are coming down from New York. . . The advantages of the Strand are that it's a big house (its seats are in usable condition, 900 on the orchestra floor, the rest of 2000 seats split between two balconies), a few coats of paint would make it workable out front. . . Backstage is another story; they'd have to knock apart a Ninth st. beer joint to get the scenery and actors in and they'd have to build dressing rooms where some offices are now. . . To solve the immediate need for a living theater here, the Strand would do. . . As a permanent theater of the twentieth century; it's as up to date as the one-horse shay. . . In the days when the Strand was at the top of the heap as the Academy of Music, the main entrance was on D st., which is could easily be again. . . . The Notes family (a second son, Isaac, is the house manager) would like to sell, is willing to rent. . . On the all-important segregation question, Father Notes, who's still, for all his age, the Big Boss, is all in favor of a nonsegregation policy, but the workings will be up to the tenants . . . All this talk of the Strand has been brewing under cover for several months, but definite offers, the backstage problems, renovation (part of which the Notes family is willing to undertake) and the honky-tonk air of good old Ninth st. have been getting in the stew. . . . Yesterday along that gay, gray way we also picked up another morsel of gossip. . . The Gayety might enter the legit house bidding picture, but as one of our brightest fellows said: "What! That would do away with burlesque, too!"

ARE THE TEEN-AGERS hep to the Capitol-Hecht Co. hunt to find Washington's Teen Queen? . . . Girls from 13 to 17 in the metropolitan area are eligible, there's nothing to buy and entrants will be judged on the basis of charm, figure and fashion grooming . . . You can get more details from the Teen Circle at Hecht's any day but Saturday and Sunday . . . Washington finals will be at the Capitol Wednesday night, August 18, with the winner going on to the National Teen Queen Contest, which promises an interview from Metro's talent department, a three-day all-expense trip to New York and your phizz on the cover of "Calling All Girls." . . . All this in honor of Jane Powell's Capitol-bound film, "A Date With Judy."

THE CAPITOL also is on the hunt for Washington talent in the designing field, open to men and women over 18 . . . "Going Native's" director, Gene Ford, is after original sketches for dresses. The winner will get a full scholarship at the Magda School of Dress Design . . . Entries should be mailed to the Magda School Scholarship Award Editor, Capitol Theater, by noon Wednesday, September 1.

THE HIPPODROME announces a drop in admission prices . . . Monday through Saturday the new charges are .40 for the matinee, .65 for evenings—and Sundays.

"HEARTBREAK HOUSE" has done so well at Catholic University that they're adding a performance Sunday night, but that's positively the last for the group's first Shaw venture, an unqualified success . . . Another sell-out this week has been Elisabeth Bergner's "Escape Me Never" at Olney, which is adding a Saturday matinee program today to be continued through the rest of the season.

IN BRIEF: It's an all-star program at Griffith Stadium tonight when such folk as Noble Sissle, W. C. Handy, Napoleon Reed and Muriel Rahn (both were in "Carmen Jones") join 500 local performers in a benefit for Mary Cardwell Dawson's National Negro Opera Company; as he did last year, Clark Griffith is donating his stadium to the cause . . . "The Sons of the Pioneers" are the headliners at Connie B. Gay's hillbilly show tonight at Constitution Hall . . . Woody Herman and his band play tonight at the Chesapeake Beach Park . . . Tryouts will be held Monday night for a series of plays to be produced by the American Theater Wing Hospital Committee; 2020 Massachusetts ave. is the place, 8 o'clock the hour . . .

ORVAL HOPKINS' report of the Capitol's stage show didn't make yesterday's paper . . . here it is: "Fred Lowery, the whistler, headlines and my first thought about his calling is that it must beat playing the harp. Less equipment to pack around. The Burns Twins and Evelyn, a tap dance team, pleased me nighly and the Three Winter Sisters, some dancing girls and Sammy White, a comedian, also are working. Sam Jack Kaufman is introducing Judy Ellington, a handsome songstress."

Union Expects Wage Rise for Bell Workers

The Communications Workers of America (Ind.) will shortly seek wage boosts for 87,000 Bell telephone workers—including more than 6000 in Washington.

CWA President Joseph A. Beirne announced that on August 16 the union—now negotiating new contracts for 130,000 additional members—will reopen seven Bell system contracts signed this spring.

Agreements covering two CWA members in Washington—divisions 36 and 50—were signed in May. At that time the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. agreed to permit two wage reopenings during the life of the contract, with provisions for cancellation if no agreement is reached on wages during either of the reopenings.

Beirne warned that the 217,000 union members will be in a position to strike unless they get a wage increase.

Pool Parlor Manager, 24, Shot 4 Times

A 24-year-old pool hall manager was shot four times yesterday by a man whom the manager, according to police, had ordered out of the pool room a few minutes earlier.

In Gallinger Hospital, Charles Wilson, 835 52d st. ne., manager of the pool hall at 4403 Sheriff rd. ne., was reported last night to be in "good condition," but suffering gunshot wounds in the left leg and side.

A 21-year-old laborer, Wilbert Thomas, 4554 Minnesota ave. ne., was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon at Fourteenth Precinct station after he was identified, according to police, by Wilson as his assailant.

The shooting, witnessed by several patrons of the pool hall, occurred about 4 p. m. a few minutes after police said, Wilson had awakened Thomas, asleep in a chair, and told him to leave the pool hall.

Thomas allegedly fired five shots from a 38-caliber automatic, one of which failed to take effect, police said.

Doctors Given Drugs to Cure 2400 of VD

Enough penicillin to treat and cure 2400 persons infected with gonorrhea has been sent on request to more than 150 District physicians since the District Health Department drive to curb gonorrhea started two weeks ago.

The penicillin is supplied free of charge under a grant from the United States Public Health Service, in support of the drive.

One immediate effect of the drive's publicity of symptoms and dangers of the venereal disease has been a more than five-fold increase in telephone calls daily to Metropolitan 4600, the Health Department's VD information number.

The Health Department clerk, who answers the number reports that calls have increased from four to five a day, before the drive, to 25 to 35 a day.

Then, too, the United States Public Health Service reports that its dispensary at 4th and D sts. sw., has been receiving 6 to 12 phone or personal visits by individuals seeking tests for VD. Actually, this dispensary handles only Government employes and is not a VD clinic. So it directs these inquirers to District Health Department clinics.

The District VD clinic at the Polk Health Center, 7th and P sts. nw., handles between 400 and 500 persons a day. The clinic at the Southwest Health Center, Delaware ave. and I st. sw., has been getting 55 to 65 visitors a day. Not all, of course are VD victims. Some apply for routine tests, food handlers for example, many who suspect they have gonorrhea or syphilis prove to be uninfected.

Health officials, however, say it is too early in the campaign to state as yet whether there has been a noticeable increase in VD patients at clinics since the drive was launched.

County 'Closes' Case of Laurel Train Wreck

"Annapolis, Md., Aug. 6 (AP).—State's Attorney James C. Morton, jr., today said "there is no basis" for criminal prosecution after an investigation of a train wreck June 10 near Laurel.

One person was killed and 53 injured in the wreck of a Baltimore & Ohio passenger train.

An Interstate Commerce Commission report blamed an "unsafe" track. "No train should have been permitted to move over the track in the condition which existed when the derailment occurred," the ICC said.

Morton said in a statement that "the matter is closed" so far as Anne Arundel County is concerned. His statement, in part, said:

"The investigation included a careful study of the report and findings of the Interstate Commerce Commission; study and consultation with the Maryland State police who made a thorough investigation into the circumstances surrounding the accident, and independent investigation and consideration by this office.

"In the course of the investigation it was learned that the two foremen involved have been released from the company's employment and that one of the individuals has suffered a nervous breakdown as a result of the unfortunate incident."

Hyderabad Peace Fails

New Delhi, India, Aug. 6 (U.P.)—Reliable reports from Hyderabad said today that Premier Mir Laik Ali, who threatened to resign yesterday, has returned to power and that last-minute efforts to reach a peaceful settlement with India were on the verge of collapse.

The judge's outburst to Brophy about favoritism was in connection with the nolle prosse Tuesday of the drunken driving case against Thomas L. Dabney, 37, of 6 Woodhaven blvd., Bethesda, Md.

Both Brophy and King denied knowing Dabney and added that absolutely no pressure had been brought to bear to dismiss this case. They said it was done solely because the police record stated that Dabney's urinalysis showed only .12 per cent alcohol.

It was originally believed the urinalysis was not given Dabney on July 5 until 14 hours after his arrest. But police reexamined their records yesterday and reported that the examination was given less than two hours after the arrest.

Meanwhile, Judge Raedy, according to the assignment commissioner, handled but one new case all day and that one in chambers. Her secretary reported the judge left the courthouse for the day before 4:30 p. m.

She did, however, request and receive from the corporation counsel's office the Dabney records as well as that of an Allen M. Boettcher, who pleaded guilty before her recently and received her usual penalty in driving-while-drunk cases—$50 fine or 60 days.

CTC Hearing Enlivened by Clash Over Questioning

PUC Chairman's Warning to Lawyer Stirs 'Resentment' Of Harry Booth

An all-day hearing yesterday on a Capital Transit Co. fare increase request was enlivened briefly by an exchange among lawyers and a Public Utilities Commission official.

The show of temper came during the cross-examination of J. E. Heberle, CTC vice president and comptroller, by Ben C. Sigal, president of the local chapter of Americans for Democratic Action, who was representing the group.

PUC Chairman James G. Flanagan, after ruling a question by Sigal as improper, pointedly advised him not to take suggestions from other counsel. This apparently referred to Harry R. Booth, counsel for the Washington Committee for Consumer Protection, who was sitting alongside, awaiting his turn to cross-examine.

Booth Voices Resentment

Booth jumped to his feet. "If you are referring to me, I resent that very much."

Flanagan flushed and then, in measured words, directed: "Mr. Booth, sit down. Mr. Sigal, proceed."

Further hostilities were averted by the calling of a recess.

Booth formerly was OPA utilities counsel and chief of its public utilities branch. As such, and as a special counsel for the Treasury, he appeared at several hearings before PUC as an intervenor. Frequent differences between him and PUC members broke out during these sessions and yesterday's outburst was similar.

CTC has asked for increases of from 10 to 15 cents for cash fare, two tokens for a quarter and weekly passes raised from $1.50 to $1.85.

Attorney Questions Official

Sigal, the ADA lawyer, subjected Heberle to a thorough grilling, attempting to shake the premises on which the new CTC rate schedule was proposed. His principal interrogations were:

1. Whether the company, in anticipating a 6 per cent decline in passenger traffic, had given consideration to trends of Federal employment, population figures, nearby building plans and other factors.

Heberle replied that the expected drop was based on records kept over many years, and that the effect of the factors mentioned could not be forecast accurately.

2. Why operation and maintenance costs would remain high in the light of a reduction of bus lines and other potential cuts in routes.

Heberle declared that the service reductions and other operating economies already have taken place, but have been offset by higher wage rates and increased costs of materials. He said further cuts were impossible because of minimum standards required by the PUC.

Breakdown of Accounts

3. A breakdown by accounts of the factors involved in the preparation of the new schedule.

Heberle said he could not comply completely with this request, although he did show work-sheets of his computations. Basically, he said operating costs shown in the first six months of 1948, plus anticipated passenger decline, material increased costs, and other variables, resulted in the need for the proposed schedule of fares.

He said, further, that if the entire rate boost is granted, the company still will be below the 10 per cent return on the rate base felt necessary to put the firm in "good" financial shape. He declined, however, to estimate the percentage return which would result from the proposed fares.

The hearing will continue Monday at 10 a. m. in the District Building, with cross-examination of Heberle by Booth.

'White' Court Demanded by Woman Here

A 40-year-old woman defendant was placed in contempt of Municipal Court yesterday when she demanded a "white judge, a white clerk and a white district attorney."

She is Mrs. Elizabeth C. Pearson of 4503 6th st., Arlington, Va. She was given a $10 fine or 10 days in jail, but the penalty was rescinded.

When she was being arraigned on a charge of assault with a knife, she repeatedly shouted her demand. Judge Armond Scott, the only Negro jurist on the bench here, said in disgust:

"I've been on the bench 13 years and this is the only time I've ever met an animal of that low type."

Later, however, he relented and rescinded the fine.

The judge continued the stabbing case against the woman for 30 days after she shouted that she was a "psychotic patient" and asked for treatment. Judge Scott recommended that she receive an examination at the District Jail.

Her bondsman, had surrendered her to the court because of her alleged failure to keep appointments with him. She had been under $1000 bond.

The clerk to whom she was referring was Alfred Scott, the judge's nephew. The prosecutor, Edward Carey, is white.

After she was declared in contempt the woman appeared hysterical. Judge Scott said she apparently had been drinking. When the proceedings were over, she said, "Thank you, your honor."

Police Board Verdicts on 2 Set for Today

A police trial board is expected to announce this morning its disposition of charges against Pvt. Talbert Dowling, 38, and Pvt. Frank Bones, 50, which were heard yesterday.

Pvt. Bones, who is assigned to the Eighth Precinct and has been on the force 23 years, pleaded guilty to charges of failing to report through the patrol signal system and of entering a building for other than police business.

Pvt. Dowling, who has seven years of service and is assigned to the Fifth Precinct, pleaded not guilty to a charge of being under the influence of liquor while on duty on July 31.

Lieut. W. P. Barnes of Fifth Precinct testified that Dowling appeared to be drunk when he came into the station house to report off duty at 4 p. m. on that day. The policeman had a bottle of ketchup in his pocket, Lieut. Barnes said.

Dowling, who testified he had not had a drink at any time during the day, produced two witnesses who said he was not drunk half an hour before he reported off duty. Mrs. Jesse K. Henry, owner of a cleaning store at 156 L st. se., and Webster O'Connor of 409 I st. se., presser at the store, said he had come into the store at 3:30 p. m. to claim some clothes and was not intoxicated at the time.

Pvt. Dowling testified the bottle of ketchup he had was for another policeman in the station house. He was before a trial board on June 18, when a charge of conduct prejudicial to the Police Department was dismissed.

Trial board members who heard yesterday's cases were Inspector Milton D. Smith, Capt. Archie M. Winfree and Asst. Corporation Counsel Robert D. Wise.

Recreation Needs Of Cleveland Park Area Surveyed

A survey of recreation needs in the Cleveland Park area, with about 29,000 residents, is being made this week by the Citizens Council for Community Planning.

About 1000 questionnaires will be given out to a sampling of persons in homes and apartments in the area, which has relatively few public recreation facilities.

The council, a group of 300 District citizens interested in city planning, chose Cleveland Park for its survey after consultation with the District Recreation Board and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Court Restrains CAB In Air Line Suspension

The Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday was put under a temporary restraining order preventing it from suspending the operations of Standard Air Lines, Inc., of Long Beach, Calif.

The order was issued by Justice Edward M. Curran in District Court pending a review of a CAB suspension order against the air line.

The Government contends the air line violated regulations as to flight schedules and field of operation.

Ban on Slot Machines Is Rejected

A proposal to drive slot machines out of the town of Bladensburg by imposing prohibitive license fees was given a cold shoulder by the Town Council last night.

But the council, in a later action, did vote on first reading for an ordinance to set "reasonable" license fees on the coin-operated devices.

Councilman Carroll Palmer, who proposed the prohibitive ordinance, withdrew his motion after it failed to get a second from any of the other four councilmen present. He also proposed the "reasonable" fee ordinance.

Palmer, in his first motion, called for a $1000 annual license fee for each machine, contending the machines are paying off by subterfuge although cash-paying machines are prohibited in Prince Georges County.

"There was gambling here before I was born and it will be here after I'm gone," Mayor Andrew Gasch commented. "If businessmen in nearby communities can make a little money off these machines I don't see why ours can't do the same."

After the cool reception given his original proposal, Palmer then proposed the ordinance to provide license fees for slot machines. He did not specify what the license fees should be. This motion met unanimous approval of the council. The amount of the fees must be incorporated in the motion before its second and final reading.

The council approved employment of two full-time policemen to supplement the present force. The new men will receive annual salaries of $2000 and will work six days a week.

The council also voted an ordinance to require carnivals and other traveling shows to obtain permits from the town council.

Alexandria Hospital to Aid Indigent

Social Service Department Will Follow Up Cases After Treatment

Alexandria Hospital yesterday announced establishment of a social service department to assist indigent patients and to follow up each case after hospitalization.

Mrs. Nancy H. McPherson, professional medical social worker who previously did similar work with the Alexandria Department of Public Welfare, will head the new department.

Hospital officials said one duty of the department will be to screen indigent patients on arrival, and to decide whether their hospitalization should be paid by the Department of Public Welfare, Health Security Administration, or other agency.

Hospital Administrator Van C. Adams also announced the hospital will (1) continue to require $75 deposits on admission in all except emergency cases, and (2) will inforce a "revitalized program" to collect from all patients able to pay.

To pay off $200,000 in back debts, the hospital raised $193,000 in a public campaign in June and July.

Byrd Gives Plans for New Medical School Set-Up

Baltimore, Aug. 6 (AP).—Plans for reorganization of the University of Maryland Medical School and Hospital, including appointment of a medical education and research director, were announced yesterday.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university, said the changes were worked out after studies by the board of regents and an outside professional survey group. They will involve appointment of a number of administrative officers, development of teaching contacts with rural hospitals, substantial enlargement of the university hospital, and the establishment of a psychiatric unit there.

The year-long study, said D Byrd, was supplemented by a survey made by Dr. Basil MacLean, superintendent of Strong Memorial Hospital at Rochester, N. Y.; Dr. Robert Buerke, director of graduate studies at the University of Pennsylvania Hospitals, and Dr. William T. Sanger, president of the Medical College of the University of Richmond.

He said the new office of director of medical education and research would have administrative authority over the medical school, hospital, nurses' training school, dispensary, and all the development under these units.

Pending appointment of a man to fill the new post, Dr. Maurice C. Pincoffs, head of the department of medicine, will serve as a temporary special assistant to the president in the planning of new construction for the proposed psychiatric unit.

Other appointments to be made include: dean of the Medical School; medical director of the University Hospital; business manager of the University Hospital and Dispensary; and director of nursing education and nursing services.

Mason Considering Plan For Gallinger Hospital

A suggested plan for the reorganization of Gallinger Hospital's administration is being given consideration by District Commissioner Guy Mason, he disclosed yesterday.

The program recommended by a committee of the District Medical Society called for ending of dual control of the city hospital and substituting instead a "young, energetic physician, well trained in hospital and medical school administration," as medical director, with full authority over the entire personnel.

Mason, who is responsible for District institutions, said yesterday that he has been considering the taking of this step for some time. Pending a decision, he will ask the medical schools of George Washington and Georgetown Universities to continue Dr. P. S. Rossiter, chief of staff, for six months. He is scheduled to retire September 1.

He pointed out that if the society's suggestion were adopted, additional funds would be required for the director's post, in order to attract a well-qualified man. If he decides in favor of the plan, he said he and his fellow Commissioners would ask Congress in January for an additional appropriation for salaries of the new post and for other doctors.

Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, head of the G. W. medical school, left last night for Colorado Springs, Colo., on a three-week vacation. The Rev. Paul A. McNally, head of the Georgetown school, was unavailable for comment.

HOW HUMAN—Oscar, a parrot of many accomplishments, prepares to dunk his breakfast toast in coffee with an assist from his mistress, Miss Joan McIntyre, 18, in their kitchen at 5302 N. 5th st., Arlington, Va. Oscar, who also sings, laughs, and, of course, talks, was brought from Nicaragua in 1927. At that time he spoke only Spanish.

GOSSIP—Oscar rings up a feathered friend. His end of the conversation is, "Hello, there, Arthur." But Miss McIntyre, a telephone operator, says he calls the family to the phone whenever it rings. Oscar is fond of confusing the neighborhood kids by imitating their mothers so faithfully that they often head homeward on the run when he calls.

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

TELLING HIM OFF—Oscar here gives a piece of his mind to Pat, the McIntyres' dog. He has just finished giving a not-too-polished rendition of "God Bless America." Oscar has the neighborhood girls in a tizzy with his mastery of the street-corner wolf's whistle. And his greeting for Joan's mother, Mrs. Helen McIntyre, of whom he is not too fond, is "Hello, Granny." Oscar delights in pulling clothespins from clean sheets Mrs. McIntyre hangs out to dry.

Wife, 63, Relents As Husband, 75, Had Told Court

James H. Monroe, a 75-year-old carpenter, proved yesterday he understands his 63-year-old wife.

She charged him Wednesday with beating her over the head with a baseball bat, but was unable to appear in Municipal Court that day since she was hospitalized for a previously-incurred heart condition.

Monroe said at that hearing he was sure that in a couple of days Wife Mary wouldn't want to prosecute him. He said that she had been "getting uppity lately."

Sure enough, yesterday, Judge Armond Scott received a letter from Mrs. Monroe announcing that she forgave her spouse but asked the judge to bawl him out for beating her. Judge Scott did so.

When Monroe thanked him, Judge Scott said, "Don't thank me. Thank your wife."

"I will, your honor. I will just as soon as I get home," Monroe replied.

J. C. Scarborough Is Exonerated in Larceny of $2000

Joseph C. Scarborough, 35, of 1209 42d pl. ne., was exonerated yesterday of charges of grand larceny and giving a false report.

A roomer at his house, Miss Christine Green, discovered that more than $2000 in cash and bonds had been stolen from her mattress. The sum turned up in a tin box in the basement, police said. Scarborough was arrested and charged.

Muncipal Court prosecutors declined to prosecute because:

1. There was a technical larceny, but no evidence to connect Scarborough with it.

2. Since there was a larceny, Scarborough could not be accused of making a false report.

Alexandria To Get New Tax Forms Next Year

System Expected To Add $100,000 To City Income on Personal Property

New personal property tax forms for Alexandria designed to add $100,000 a year to city revenues, have been approved by State Tax Commissioner C. H. Morrissett, city officials announced yesterday.

They will go into effect next year.

The new forms separate the present single form into two parts—one for listing residential property, the other for business machinery and equipment.

The new forms will require individual detailed listing of many items now lumped in one entry, thus giving officials opportunity to verify value.

They will ask for make, model and year on items such as automobiles, radios and refrigerators, so their value can be checked in price catalogues and furniture will be listed according to rooms rather than lumped in one figure. Office equipment, industrial machinery and tools also will be listed in detail.

The new form for residential property gives the commissioner of revenue a standard for taxing those who fail to make returns or make incomplete returns, Morrissett said.

In the future, the revenue commissioner can assess the personal property of homeowners who try to evade the tax at 10 per cent of the assessed value of their real estate, and of those who rent their homes, at 50 per cent of their annual rent.

The new forms were prepared on recommendation of the Bureau of Public Administration of the University of Virginia, which recently surveyed the city's tax structure. The bureau told the city that, although it took in $300,000 last year from personal property taxes, it is losing large amounts of potential revenue for lack of proper assessment and enforcement of the tax.

Polio Cases Hit 49 Total In D. C. Area

Polio cases for 1948 in Greater Washington rose to 49 yesterday with the reporting of a new Washington victim by the D. C. Health Department.

The newly reported victim is a 2½-year-old boy living in the 4800 block of 5th st. nw. He is under treatment at Children's Hospital.

He is the District's twenty-fourth victim. Cases in nearby Maryland and Virginia so far reported have been 25, bringing the cumulative total for Greater Washington to 49.

At Richmond two cases of infantile paralysis were reported to the State Health Department today as Virginia's official polio count for 1948 moved up to 127 cases.

The two victims, both hospitalized, are a 4-year-old girl residing in Portsmouth and a 27-year-old woman in Roanoke.

In North Carolina, the polio epidemic, which health officials had hoped was receding, shot upward again yesterday with 55 cases being reported to the State Board of Health. It was the largest number to be reported for any one day of epidemic.

The new cases brought North Carolina's total for the year to 1253 and deaths to 66.

North Carolina Denies Polio Check of Autoists

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 6 (AP).—The State highway patrol described as "ridiculous" today rumors that motorists are being stopped at the North Carolina State line because of polio.

"We have heard these rumors, but there is absolutely no barrier of any kind of travel into and out of North Carolina," Col. L. C. Rosser of the patrol's safety division, declared.

Stolen Purse Found In Trash Receptacle

The Washington Post

KEEPS HIS EYES OPEN—Pvt. H. H. (Jack) Prince of the Metropolitan Police Department's Traffic Division, always on the alert for the unusual, looks into the woman's handbag he found in a trash receptacle. It contained Government bonds worth $125.

Thanks to an eagle-eyed traffic policeman, who looks out for more than traffic, a woman salesclerk will get back her stolen pocketbook.

The policeman is Pvt. Jack Prince, who was directing traffic yesterday at 14th and G sts. nw.

Peering into the sidewalk trash receptacle at his corner—a matter of course with him—Prince spotted a woman's brown alligator skin handbag.

The handbag, the cop-who-looks-everywhere found, contained, besides personal effects, two United States Treasury bonds, one a $100 bond and the other of a $25 denomination.

The bonds were made out to Miss Eva Wallace, 1918 I st. nw., and using this information a reporter for The Washington Post located Miss Wallace at Woodward & Lothrop, where she works.

She said she missed the handbag from her locker at the department store at noon, and that in addition to the bonds it contained her keys and her last week's salary.

Policy Payoff Delay

Players of "100," Thursday's winning number in the horse race policy racket, last night still had not received their payoff from a large operator working in Northeast Washington, it was reported last night.

The operator, whose territory was said to cover Northeast from Union Station to 15th and H sts. ne. and a part of adjoining Southeast, reportedly was hit for from $75,000 to $90,000. Most of the "winning" bettors were said to be women.

Slips for yesterday's number were picked up by the numbers operator, who was said to have written between $3000 and $5000 daily. He told Thursday's winners he would return last night with their money. By 9 p. m. they began to wonder.

The council further asked that the proposed transfer of apprentice training classes at Bell Vocational School, 7th and D st. nw., to Powell Junior High School be made as soon as possible. The Bell school does not have facilities to accommodate all apprentices now in training in the District.

Code Set Straight

A husband who sets up a code of "bylaws" for his wife isn't supposed to beat her up for breaching them, Judge Armond Scott of Municipal Court ruled yesterday.

William T. Martin, 21, a preacher, of 82 C st. se., was convicted of beating up his wife, Etheline, 22.

He said they agreed when they were married that if she contacted any of her former boy friends, she would forfeit her share of a paycheck her husband receives from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

He added that he learned that she had written a letter to an "old beau" and an argument ensued in which either his wife or his mother-in-law hit him in the mouth with a brick. Martin said he then "accidentally punched Etheline in the stomach."

Judge Scott said that the breach of the code didn't justify the assault, but "the court will take the reverend's personal bond not to punch his wife any more."

In Court Ruling

Diamond's Weight Is Final Factor

The weight of a diamond in a ring taken from a home in a burglary tipped the scales of justice yesterday.

Municipal Court Judge Aubrey Fennell denied the claim of Charles B. Sherman, a jeweler, of 728 14th st. nw., that it was his lawfully purchased property and ordered its return to Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Gravelle of 8720 Bradley blvd., Bethesda, Md.

The ring was taken from the home of Gravelle, a Washington attorney, when it was burglarized in June 1947.

Sherman, who brought suit against the District property custodian for return of the ring, claimed that the stone weighed about 1½ carats, and therefore could not be the ring lost by Gravelle, who said it was a 1¾ carat stone purchased from A. Kahn, 14th st. jeweler, for $950.

Gravelle backed up his claim with the testimony of a diamond expert from Kahn's and of Joseph Davis, who identified the ring as one taken from Gravelle's home and sold to Sherman for $466. Davis was brought to testify at Gravelle's request from the penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., where he is now serving time for a Federal offense.

When Sherman and Gravelle's witnesses disagreed, after examining the stone through their glasses, Sherman agreed to pay the cost of resetting the stone if it were removed from the ring and weighed.

Thereupon all parties concerned, including Assistant Corporation Counsel Hubert B. Pair, repaired to A. Kahn's, where the stone was removed and found to weigh 1¾ carats.

Judgment was given against Sherman for costs, and damages in the amount of $20 for resetting the diamond.

Sherman also lost possession of other jewelry valued at $2300 when the front show window of his establishment was rifled early yesterday morning, he reported to police. The jewelry was removed by breaking the window glass, he said.

3 Policemen in 3 Accidents, 2 as Victims, 1 as Driver

Pvt. J. L. Hoffman — Pvt. Alfred Beye — Maj. Westermann

Two Park Department policemen were under treatment last night for injuries sustained earlier in separate District accidents, while a Metropolitan policeman was listed as the driver of a car which struck a 9-year-old boy.

One of the injured Park policemen, Pvt. Alfred D. Beye of 4701 4th st. ne., was given first aid by an Army nurse whose automobile collided with his motorcycle.

Four of Family Hurt

Four members of a Washington family were injured, three severely, when the automobile in which they were riding collided headon with a pickup truck in Prince Georges County yesterday.

The automobile was knocked on its side, Prince Georges County police said. The accident occurred on Route 3, 2 miles south of Silver Hill, Md.

Admitted to Providence Hospital in serious condition were Howard N. Dent, 36, 1720 W st. se., identified as the driver, with severe scalp lacerations; his wife, Mrs. Elsie S. Dent, 27, multiple lacerations of the head and arm, and their 18-month-old son, Howard, jr., multiple head lacerations. A daughter, Sophie, 5, was released after treatment for cuts and bruises.

Driver of the truck, Charles Magruder, 6532 C st., Maryland Park, Md., was not injured.

Pedestrian Badly Hurt

Severe injuries were suffered by a 65-year-old District resident in a daylight pedestrian accident which sent Samuel L. Kinard of 1654 Rosedale st. ne. to Casualty Hospital with head injuries and possible broken leg.

Kinard was struck by a car operated by William Hunter, 26, of 3416 B st. se. as he attempted to cross K st. near 2d st. ne., police reported.

Pvt. Beye was reported in good condition at Emergency Hospital after a Rock Creek pkwy. accident involving Maj. Ethel G. Westermann, 37, of 2729 Ordway st. nw., chief nurse at the Pentagon dispensary.

Police, who later obtained $100 collateral from the nurse on a charge of failing to give full time and attention to driving, said she was going south on the parkway and intended to turn right into a ramp near the K st. overpass project.

She said she saw she could not turn right because of a sign, and swerved left, police said. Her car struck Private Beye, who was sitting on his motorcycle. She told police she did not see him.

The other injured park motorcycle policeman, Pvt. John L. Hoffman, 32, of Greenbelt, Md., was in collision late Thursday with a car driven by Harry Cherkassky, 40, of 24 Hawaii ave. ne., according to police.

Pvt. Hoffman was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a possible fracture of the right leg and left shoulder. Cherkassky was charged with failure to yield the right of way. The accident occurred at 4th st. and Harewood rd. ne.

Richard Williams, 9, of 107 N st. nw., was suffering from possible fracture of the spine at Casualty Hospital after being struck by a car driven by Charles K. Daub, 31, Metropolitan policeman, of 2116 N. Capitol st., yesterday.

Police reported the child ran between two parked cars in front of 705 1st st. nw. and into the street, where he was struck by the bumper of Daub's car. Daub took him to the hospital.

Three Navy men hurt in a crash at Rockville were listed at the Naval Hospital in Bethesda as Robert L. Provencal, 19, who suffered head injuries; John Pake, 20, cuts on the leg, and William J. Hausherr, 18, cuts on the forehead.

Police reported they were apparently unable to negotiate a sharp curve on Route 28, about 4 miles north of Rockville. Their car crashed through a fence, turned over twice and caught fire. All three were able to get out.

Dubro's Luscious Voice Heard In Watergate 'Carmen' Debut

By Paul Hume

The Lyric Opera Company strengthened its initial offering last night with a sound performance of Bizet's "Carmen."

The opera pivots around the title role, assumed for the first time in her career by Bette Dubro. Her voice is luscious, used with ease and color. Her soft work is smooth and clear, and her range readily covers the wide dimensions set forth by the composer.

Vocally Dubro has only one thing to watch: she must not let that tendency toward an "operatic wobble" increase. Her staging of the part is excellent, with many touches of ingenuity. We do not care for the way she ends the second verse of the Gypsy Song, preferring Bizet's writing, but singers will strive for effect.

Her costumes were handsome, but the second act pale blue is not at all appropriate. With her fine beginnings in opera, we hope Miss Dubro will go slowly and build on a good foundation.

Second debut of the evening was that of Katharine Hansel, as Micaela. When a fine musician turns to opera, the results are generally eminently fortuitous. Hansel recognized in Washington for her sure artistry, was a most appealing figure as Jose's country sweetheart. Her voice is perfectly attuned to Micaela's lines, and she sang with great beauty. Her duet with Frederick Jagel in act one was the finest singing of that act, while her third act aria, limpid in sound and gratefully phrased, won pronounced approval from the audience.

Jagel is constant in his singing, no matter what the opera. His voice had little nuance last night but was solid and, in the Flower Song, most compelling.

Cesare Bardelli, another new singer brought to Washington by the new company, proved a convincing toreador, with his big, virile voice, and a real flair in stage affairs. He is the finest Escamillo in seasons, and his other work will be a pleasure to note. He ought, however, to polish his French enunciation.

Victor Tatozzi as Zuniga displayed a fine, warm bass, and command of the part. The chorus found itself less happy than in the preceding evening. Bizet's writing leaves the voices more exposed than Verdi, but in solid passages the sound was more attractive.

Once again Pietro Cimara manipulated a performance of distinction. The first two acts were slow in starting, but the third act, from start to finish, moved with dispatch, building up a fine intensity. Costumes and ballet were handsome, but the scenery fell short of Spanish atmosphere, both inside and out.

The entire Watergate capacity was sold out, and tonight's "Aida" is almost gone as well. Early inquiries for remaining tickets may save disappointment.

FBI Chief Terms Police Wages 'Disgraceful'

By The Associated Press

J. Edgar Hoover of the FBI thinks it's time the Nation's cops got a raise in pay.

He says the pay of an average policeman today "is disgraceful in comparison with his responsibilities."

Writing in the August issue of the FBI enforcement bulletin, Hoover says that even in cities of over 500,000 population the average maximum pay of a patrolman is $3180. He added:

"When we consider that the base pay for a stenographer in the Government service ranges from $2168 to $2394 the inadequacies of police salaries are apparent . . .

"It is indeed a shortsighted policy which sends a man to a daily job requiring the tact of a diplomat and the courage of a soldier at a wage which is lower than that paid for far less skilled employment."

Red Cross Reports Aid to Veterans, Soldiers, Kin

Sol Bloom Recognizes Radio Tune—He Wrote It

By Marie McNair

FOR A lot of hopeful tuners in to the "Stop-the-Music" program weekly on Sunday nights, Representative Sol Bloom has the answer. Tomorrow night $19,500 in prizes await the lucky person identifying the tune. Mr. Bloom says he knows it. Why? The reason Mr. Bloom says he knows the name of the tune, is because he wrote it.

MRS. MCNAIR

Well, the mystery melody which will be played every Sunday night until someone names it right, is according to Representative Bloom, the "Sun Dance." He says he wrote it back in 1901 with Leo Friedman.

(To win, of course, on the program one must not only know the tune but be telephoned during the program and asked to identify it.)

Mr. Bloom, was as a matter of fact, writting popular songs at the turn of the century, and at the same time, managing a vaudeville house. Through an inheritance from a friend he invested $10,000 in real estate, was soon on his way into politics.

Vera Bloom, his daughter, has tried her hand at lyric writing, laid it aside for a more profitable profession—writing books. She's putting the finishing touches on "The Entertaining Lady," while summering up at Swampscott on the Massachusetts North Shore.

TOWN TOPICS: Champagne glasses were raised yesterday, at the Bolivian Embassy as some 80 members of the Bolivian colony in Washington met to celebrate their Independence Day. It was strictly a nationalist party with the Ambassador and Senora de Martinez Vargas the hosts.

A man with a name that sings itself, which sounds as though it might have come from a Romberg operetta, is Pablo Merry del Val. He's due to arrive today from Spain to be the new cultural relations attache of the Spanish Embassy. Former Chief of Foreign Press during the Spanish civil war, Senor Merry del Val is the son of a diplomat who was once Spanish Ambassador to the Court of St. James's.

Gugrun Hurja is having a few friends in for dinner this evening and by next week will be on her way to Northern Michigan to join her husband, Emil, who's been there several weeks already for fishing.

Among those who'll be there tonight are Joseph Farrington, Delegate from Hawaii; Gen. and Mrs. Clayton Adams, the Agricultural Attache of the Spanish Embassy and Mme. Echeagray who are in the throes of moving from the house on Macomb st., where they've lived for 18 years, to the one they've bought at 3110 Hawthorne st.

Mr., Mrs. Hill Take Eastern Trip

Mr. and Mrs. William Sasscer Hill left yesterday by motor for New York to spend the weekend with Mrs. Hill's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Tyler Hathaway Willett, at Rye, N. Y. From there they will motor to Montreal and then take the boat cruise through the St. Lawrence and Saguenay Rivers on board the Saguenay. They will stop for a few days at the Chateau Frontenac in Quebec before returning to Pleasant Hills, their home at Marlboro, Md., the end of August.

Architect Designs Round Coffee Table To Be Made at Home

Charm, the magazine for the business girl, features in its August issue, a furniture pattern for a handsome, round coffee table, the eighth in a series of make-it-yourself patterns designed for Charm and the business girl by Klaus Grabe, noted architect.

From the pattern, you can construct a round-top table, 18 to 21 inches in height, 30 to 36 inches in diameter. A piece of thick glass may be substituted for the round wooden top to create a more modern effect, Charm suggests.

Made of sturdy plywood, the table looks rich in its natural state or with a coat of lacquer added for protection. A carpenter or lumber dealer can cut the wood for you, according to pattern specifications, and you can assemble the table at home, using a few simple tools and following the pattern's directions.

Her fiance attended the University of Minnesota and the University of Belgrade in Yugoslavia and is now attending George Washington University.

Dress Designers Invited to Contest

The contest, which is open to both men and women over 18 years of age, invites Washingtonians to send in original sketches of dresses. Judging will be entirely on the originality and appeal of design.

All entries are to be mailed to the Magda School Scholarship award Editor, Loew's Capitol Theater, by noon September 1. The winner will receive a full scholarship to the Magda School of Dress Design.

For Dining on a Summer Night

Balmain Shows Mermaid Silhouette

By Florence Mills

Paris, Aug. 6 (AP).—Pierre Balmain, youngest Paris designer, showed a line this morning which might well turn out to be the most popular silhouette of the season.

It is based on the mermaid or fishtail design he launched last May.

He also features saris (extra long and glamorous stoles), which he entwines around the figure.

Main point of his mermaid silhouette is the skirt. This is a sheath which reaches to midthigh level, or even lower. It splays out at the back in a sort of fishtail fan. It is obtained by a perfectly straight cut front and panels set at the back which flare out abruptly.

Balmain uses the same lines repeatedly for day dresses, suits and evening dresses.

On some evening gowns he slits the center front of the skirt to within a few inches of the knees. Necklines on most of them are daringly low cut. Bustlines, particularly on strapless affairs, are encrusted with gold or pastel-colored paillettes or laid around with fur.

Fancy Saris Worn

Fanciest saris in the show came in black wool edged around with panther, in white ermine and blue karakul fur.

Suits have brief peplums that flare very slightly. They have novel trimming treatment. One black velvet number had reveres and cuffs outlined with three rows of pearls.

Balmain also uses a spiral line for day and evening wear. The spiral starts at the center front of the waist and corkscrews twice around the skirt, finishing at one side of the hemline.

His coats are either redingote or full-backed. The redingotes have the fishtail treatment and the voluminous ones have fullness jutting out straight from the shoulder.

He has fancy trimmings for these also. One raglan number in lemon-colored velour had all the seams studded with baby rhinestones.

Corselet belts that stretch the entire expanse of the midriff are used countless times. They are seen on redingotes, day dresses and, in contrast color, satin for evening wear.

Balmain has designed a two purpose outfit in vermillion broadcloth. Tailored long pants were teamed with a "battledress" type jacket embroidered with gold sequins. This jacket, in turn, teamed up with a long fishtail skirt.

You can be bald and get away with it in the Balmain collection—in the evening anyway. He shows pudding basin shaped hats that hide the hair completely. One in oyster colored monkey fur looked rather like a witch's wig.

Balenciaga and Lanvin showed fall fashions Thursday featuring high waistlines and third empire dresses with skirts falling straight from bust level to waistline.

The dapper Spaniard, Christobel Balenciaga, showed coats and dresses with a waistline set more than two inches above the 1948 level.

He has a new treatment for his suits. They comprise a jacket with stand-out fluted basques which often dip either at the back or front and extremely tight, straight skirts with a slit up the back to allow leg movement.

Over the skirt he places a folded panel—sometimes two narrow ones—of matching material which hangs loose from the waist. It produces a novel effect.

Suits in the Lanvin show were mainly of the classic type but many have peplums dipping at the front.

Coats in both collections were sent-like and fur-lined. Balenciaga uses many of his coats with contrasting colors. Velure is the favorite choice of material. This is so heavy it makes them kick out as if they were starched.

The forest green velure topcoat in the Lanvin show was belted to fit in front with fullness, hanging loose from the shoulders at the back.

A lemon velure swingback coat was lined with black seal. A lavender colored edge-to-edge tulip shaped short coat was trimmed with wide black lamb.

Balenciaga Shows Coats

Balenciaga showed a full-backed raglan topcoat of caramel colored blanket velure with an inch-wide black petersham binding around all the edges. A fingertip level jacket in mustard colored duvetene had a gathered fullness falling from the new empire line.

Capes were displayed in both collections. Balenciaga has them single and tiered, flared and straight. He lines many of them with fur and sets gigantic collars on them.

Short evening dresses also are generally popular. Balenciaga uses lace or satin overlaid with lace a great deal. The combination of full flared satin skirts and embroidered contrast bodices was popular with both houses. Captain Molyneux raised his hemlines to 15 inches from the ground for daywear in his new fall fashions.

This is 2 to 3 inches shorter than last season and 4 inches shorter than the dresses shown earlier in the day by Jacques Heim.

No Epoch Followed

His collection follows no particular epoch but is a complete modernized version of several. The result is distinction and chic.

He shows deep directoire collars, "Byronic" jackets with long basques that reach to below the hips, third empire waistlines and even a third empire silhouette with the skirt falling straight from a below-the-bust waistline.

Molyneux features brief monkey jackets that fit snug to the waist and finish 2 or 3 inches beneath.

He effects a dropped sloping shoulder line for fitting and loose sleeves alike. It sometimes falls as low as 3 inches off the shoulder.

Evening wear is beautiful in the Molyneux collection. He uses rich satins, lame and brocades and trims satin evening coats with sable.

The silk jersey dresses beneath were strapless and beautifully draped.

Accessories in the Molyneux collection were eyebrow-raising. He uses gaiters with day and afternoon dresses—some long and draped to give the effect of a Russian boot and often made in the same material as the dress. Others are short, just covering the ankle and trimmed with faille and plaid taffeta.

Alpha Xi Delta Has Province Convention

Approximately 40 delegates from Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania joined with some 35 District representatives for the opening session of Alpha Xi Delta's Province 3, three-day convention. Registration at conclave headquarters in the Wardman Park Hotel was followed by an informal reception last night.

Washington Alumnae and Beta Eta Chapter of Maryland University were joint hostesses at the informal get-acquainted fete. Mrs. E. Orville Emery, D. C. Alumnae president, and Miss Marjorie Bletch, Beta Eta Chapter head, received with two national province officers. They were Mrs. A. Lawrence Fenner, fourth national vice president, of Wilmington, and Mrs. Beverley Robinson of this city, convention members at large. Included in the program last night was a showing of movies made at the fraternity's recent national convention.

Mrs. Herbert Hughes of West Virginia, is convention chairman.

On the agenda for today is continuation of registration, presentation of newly elected province officers, greetings, introduction of guests, and a discussion of membership. J. Edward Murphy of Wilmington, Del., national inspector of Sigma Nu fraternity, will be principal speaker at the organization's formal banquet tonight at 7:30.

Scales Tell Good News To Mid-Summer Reducers

This is the sixth of a series of six articles on "Summer Slimming" with budget menus by diet expert Ida Jean Kain.

By Ida Jean Kain

THE best way I know to keep you on a slim pattern the rest of August—while I'm loafing on vacation—is to pass along some inspiring success stories.

The lady from Wyoming . . .

IDA JEAN KAIN

"Used to be fat and miserable—so depressed because I weighed 176 pounds. I looked like a tub in everything I wore and was disgusted with myself. I reduced to 128 pounds and then gained back 10 pounds, because I feel best at 138. In fact, with 38 pounds gone, I feel wonderful, am very happy and love life."

Ohio reducer healthier too . . .

"When I started dieting, I weighed 160. I now weigh 135. I eat only one helping and plenty of vegetables, fruits and lean meat. I have lost my heartburn and can work without puffing or feeling all done in."

Encouragement from North Carolina . . .

"I have lost 10 pounds in five weeks with your exercises and diet. Remember you said that it may take two or three weeks to 'fall off' any and then the scales will suddenly show a loss of five or six pounds? Well, that's what happened to me. Thanks for encouraging me to keep my diet."

CALIFORNIA enthusiasm . . .

"I started your diet about two months ago and can't tell you how pleased I am. I have gone from 172 to 156 pounds. Everyone tells me I look better than I have ever looked—and much younger."

Gentleman from Indiana, a new man . . .

"I am 53 years old and used to weigh 203 pounds. Simply by eating less, I now weigh 166½. I am very much encouraged and intend losing about 20 pounds more. I find it's easy to eat to reduce."

So carry on, folks . . .

In Bridal Procession

Miss Norma Heyser of Washington became the bride of Lloyd L. Kath at a candlelight ceremony at Trinity Lutheran Church, Mount Rainier, Md., August 4. The Rev. Edwin Peiplow of Hyattsville, Md., officiated.

The bride, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Heyser, was given in marriage by her father. She wore ivory satin fashioned with long sleeves and an off-the-shoulder draped bertha. Her veil of illusion was edged with lace and was gathered to a coronet of seed pearls. She carried white roses centered with an orchid.

Mrs. Crawford Hollidge served as matron of honor for her sister. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Robert Stewart of St. Paul, Minn. and Mrs. Stewart Cain of Washington. Margaret Hollidge, jr., niece of the bride, was flower girl. Robert Stewart of St. Paul was best man and Henry Wrona and Tom Fox were ushers.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The couple will reside in Washington after their wedding trip.

Mr. Kath, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kath of Bemidji, Minn., served as secretary to the Governor of the Virgin Islands for a year previous to being commissioned as an officer in the Air Force Reserve during the war. At the close of the war he was employed on the staff of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations for a year and is now studying at the Foreign Service School of George Washington University.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Elmer Flynn Dodson, the bride wore a white marquisette gown and her fingertip veil of shadow illusion was held by a crown of seed pearls. On her Bible she carried a white orchid with stephanotis and lilies of the valley.

Miss Julia Francis was the maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Iris Johnson and Miss Dorothy Ashby.

Ralph Parmele served his brother as best man and Vernon Hodges and Robert O'Lone were ushers.

About Locating Hanging Shelf

Can you tell me where I may purchase a hanging telephone shelf, either painted or unpainted? I have searched the department stores but they do not carry this article. B. S.

There is a shop on Connecticut avenue that will make one of these shelves for you. The price is from $4 on up to $50, depending on the size, wood and design. The shop can be reached by telephoning Executive 5572.

We are moving from Washington in three weeks and would like to give away an early Edison Talking Machine, with a blue morning glory horn and a large box of round records. I thought possibly some reader who collects old things might be interested in having it. I hate to throw it way. My telephone number is Emerson 8153.

My husband recently constructed a radio cabinet of oak veneer plywood. We are now ready to finish it but find several stains on the top. Sanding does not remove the stains. Is there any way we can get them off without leaving stains that will show through a light finish? J. P.

I'd suggest trying a poultice of Fuller's earth or commercial dry-cleaning powder mixed with carbon tetrachloride. Make these two into a paste and leave it on the spots overnight. Scrape off paste next day and wipe up residue with cloth dipped in the carbon tetrachloride. If this helps, repeat treatment.

I have a light blue gabardine summer suit of a rayon material which has beer stains on it. I sent this suit to one cleaner who couldn't get the stains out. I then took it to another who said he couldn't do anything with it as the first cleaner had pressed the stain in. Is there any way I might be able to get the stain out? W. J. N.

Since professional cleaners failed to remove the spot, it's rather doubtful if home methods will accomplish anything. Old alcoholic beverage stains are almost impossible to remove, especially if they have turned brown. You might try this: Mix equal parts of denatured alcohol and water together and sponge the spot with it. Then pour on a bit of glycerine or soapless shampoo. Let stand 30 minutes and rinse in clear water. If this treatment doesn't lighten the stain, here is another possibility: (It might be well to try this out first on some inconspicuous place on the suit to be sure it doesn't affect the color.) Stretch the stained area over a bowl of water and apply a 10 per cent solution of acetic acid (obtainable in drug stores.) Let acid stand a few seconds, then rinse out in the bowl of water.

I would like to cover some books with heavy cellophane, in the same way that it's done at the rental libraries. Can you tell me where such cellophane may be purchased? L. M.

A local paint and art supply store sells this cellophane in 25-inch and 40-inch sheets. The price ranges from 88c to $1.66 a sheet, according to the thickness. To reach the store, telephone National 6386.

PETUNIA!

Victorian Lace Curtains Add To Charm of Parlors of '48

By Vivian Brown

Lace curtains at the window have rounded out the mid-Victorian look which gradually has been making inroads in the American home.

The most modern living room is taking on a look of a comfortable parlor of the gay nineties, with candle-light-effect chandeliers, globe lamps, stencil wallpapers and flower-patterned carpets. This blending of the old with the new has injected a curious informality into contemporary American decorating.

New lace curtains are designed to enhance streamlined or period furnishings. They will blend in with the most modern plastic chair, a Pennsylvania Dutch cobbler's bench or a Louis XIV gilt-edged table.

The average homemaker's interest in French provincial furnishings has led to the creation of a wide range of curtains in the provincial feeling. Designs of these fashionet curtains have been copied from old French china and fabric patterns, and from the art of the period.

Birds and butterflies, leaf, strawberry, flower and even champagne bubble patterns done in the French manner, are just a few of the designs which decorate the cobwebby window curtains.

The gimmick for Mrs. Housewife is, of course, the washability and wearability of these 1948 lace curtains. Their off-white shade will harmonize with the most muted or vibrant tones of walls, drapes or upholstery.

Man's Inhumanity to Man

Schools for Feeble Minded Are Compared to 'Human Zoos'

Most of our 78 State institutions for mental deficients are not training schools—they are little more than mental zoos, writes Edith M. Stern in an article "Take Them Off the Human Scrap Heap," in the current issue of Woman's Home Companion.

"I have never been so aware of the horrors and waste resulting from man's inhumanity to man as I was when visiting these State institutions for the feeble-minded," she writes, adding, "to see men, women and children whose mental ages run from virtually zero to 8 years—all children really—kept at a helpless, often repulsive animal level is an ugly sight.

"Do-nothingness is the rule in most insitutions," she said. "No one knows how many children could be salvaged from this human scrap heap—because so few places have tried."

Visits Are Described

Miss Stern describes visits to institutions where the feeble-minded are crowded like cattle into dull, colorless rooms, where beds are close-packed and some institutions run on prison-like routines.

She gave instances of lack of medical care, lack of attendants, and lack of teachers. Little or no education is the rule rather than the exception in the State training schools, she says. She cites some typical facts from the United States Public Health surveys:

In a Western school there is only one teacher, who has other duties, for 300 children. In another Western school "no educational and training program." In a Southern institution there is school only 60 to 90 minutes a day, four days a week, with only one of the two teachers at all qualified. In another Southern institution of 350 only 3 children in the school can read. A Southwestern school has two teachers for 1250 and when the present superintendent took over a few years ago she found attempts were being made to teach the mental deficients algebra.

Cites 'Restraint'

Throughout the country, Miss Stern says, she also observed many evidences of what is politely called restraint. At one place an epileptic boy was lying in a strait jacket. "Elsewhere," she said, "I came across two small girls tied like dogs on leashes, one end of a rope around their waists, the other end attached to a hoop on the walls. 'It keeps them from getting hurt,' I was told."

Miss Stern contends that uncounted numbers of these children, now stagnating in institutions, with a few years training and supervision might be sent out into the community to lead happy self-supporting lives. She says many have been successfully trained and parolled by the better institutions.

"Among the 162 now on parole from the District of Columbia Training School are a manager of a chain store earning $55 a week, a supervisor of a group of laundry workers, a cafeteria counter waitress, a baker's helper, a maid in a well-to-do home and a hospital kitchen worker with a civil service rating," she writes.

More money is the key to the problem, she says, not only for more space but for more personnel and better qualified personnel. "American women," she says "can demand that their State Legislatures greatly increase appropriations, must be willing to pay a few cents extra for taxes that will insure children in all State training schools real training and good care. The investment will pay off well not only in spiritual satisfaction but in actual salvage of human beings."

Why Not Have a Duck for Dinner?

By Fredrika Borchard

THEY DON'T come off the assembly line, these Pekin ducks, but you could easily believe that they do, so alike are they in color, size and formation. They are all descendants of the original Pekins brought from China nearly a hundred years ago and the family strain is clear in the shapely white-feathered birds. They are grown on duck farms all through New York and adjoining States, killed at approximately the same age and size and yield approximately the same proportion of meat per pound.

There is little that the American housewife need learn about their selection and preparation, but there is much that she can profitably unlearn. There is the widespread belief, for example, that ducks are indigestible; frequently they are, but it's not the duck that's at fault, it's the cook. If a well-seasoned duck with unbroken skin is put into a low temperature oven, uncovered, and no moisture added until the duck begins to brown, the meat will be tender, juicy and free of greasiness. If the skin is pricked, more fat will not escape that way, but the juices will, leaving the meat dry and oily. If liquid is added before browning, it will float the fat and soak the meat, which will be flabby and oily.

When selecting a duck, choose one with white rather than yellow skin. If it weighs between 5 and 6 pounds, has a flexible breastbone (not much more than gristle) and a bright yellow bill, it will almost certainly be a nine to 11 weeks' old duckling, equally suitable for roasting or broiling. If it is oversized, streamlined and dark-billed, with hard breastbone, it is probably an old bird to be used only for boiling, steaming or braising.

The rich flavor and texture of duck meat combines well with all types of high seasoning and lends itself to spicy accompaniments.

Meridian Hill Asks 30 Pct. Rent Increase

Owners of the streamlined Meridian Hill Hotel, Washington's most exclusive domicile for feminine Government workers, yesterday asked for a 30 per cent rent boost—claiming they would lose $276,000 next year without one.

James C. McGarraghy, counsel for the owners, announced that so far they haven't lost anything. But, he added, what with depreciation, interest due on a mortgage and rising costs, profits won't last long.

Tenants, on the other hand, claimed they are paying enough rent right now. One large group pays $8.25 a week at present; the increase would boost rents to $10.72 weekly.

Furthermore, Louis B. Arnold, counsel for the bulk of the 560 permanent guests, pointed out that Meridian Hill made more money for the Defense Homes Corporation during its five years of operation than virtually any other wartime housing unit.

Before going out of business, July 31, the DHC reported that the hotel's 637 rooms for Government girls made a $1,881,840 profit.

However, Examiner James G. Tyson, who heard the case at offices of the Rent Control Administration, 1740 Massachusetts ave. nw., pointed out that under the present Rent Control Act profits and losses have "no bearing." Prime matter to be considered is increased costs, he said.

Among those protesting the proposed boost was Miss Frances Alyea, 29, a Navy secretary, who said she is paying $30.40 a month for half of a double room and "I can't afford any more than that."

The attractive blonde, formerly of Shelbyville, Ind., said the other half of her room is shared by a "transient." Because transients' rents run $2 to $3 a day, their rooms are cleaned every day. Consequently, Miss Alyea said, half of her room is swept daily and one bed is made—not hers.

Pauline Leesley, a 27-year-old marine staff sergeant, reported her single room costs $34.80 a month "and I think I'm paying enough right now." The present rental eats up just about all her "per diem" allowance for rent, she said.

The examiner took the case under advisement after an all-day hearing.

Fish Proven As Nutritious As Any Meat

College Park, Md., Aug. 6 (AP).—Four "guinea pigs" at the University of Maryland who ate fish, fish and more fish for seven weeks showed that whatever its value as brain food, it's as good as meat for the human body, according to a report just made public.

Six co-eds took part in the 11-week experiment.

The first three weeks they ate a standard diet.

Then for the next seven weeks, four of the girls ate only fish as their main dinner-course. Freshwater fish, salt-water fish, shellfish. Broiled fish, baked fish, steamed fish, fried fish.

The two others, meanwhile, ate plenty of meat.

As a final check, all six consumed standard diets.

Once a week Dr. Hugo W. Nilson, Fish and Wildlife Service pharmacologist, and Shirley J. Wilson, a graduate assistant in fisheries, made blood tests of the six human guinea pigs.

Dr. Nilson noted that for the most part the red cell count and hemoglobin value of all six subjects remained about the same. (Hemoglobin is the chemical substance that colors blood red and carries oxygen from the lungs throughout the body.)

'Ike' Turns In 500-Page Job

NEW YORK.—Eisenhower's completed manuscript now is in the hands of the publishers, Doubleday & Co. It's 200,000 words long, and will be a 500-page book . . . The Army has built a Recruiting Booth on the steps of the Treasury Building in Wall Street. And although soldiers will take turns parading in front of it, the booth actually is a camouflage. It's a cover for movie cameramen who will be shooting street-crowd scenes on Wall Street for the new John Garfield picture, "The Numbers Racket."

George Abbott, the producer, is an avid rumba fan. Once a week he goes downtown to attend a night-long session of folk dancing, and there, for long hours, he rumbas. No matter how busy he is with his shows, Abbott spends at least two hours a day with the rumba . . . When Murvyn Vye, the screen actor, first came to Broadway he auditioned for a one-line role in the Abbott musical, "Best Foot Forward." The next day he received a message that Abbott wanted to see him immediately. Vye raced to the producer's office, which was crowded with job-applicants. He told the secretary his name, and was rushed into Abbott's private office. "I saw you at the Stork Club last night," said Abbott. "You did one step and I'd like to learn it." Vye showed him how it was done . . . "Er . . . now about the show," Vye suggested. Abbott shook his head; he was hiring someone else.

The sinking of the "Nevada," by the combined shelling, bombing and torpedoing of the Navy and Air Force in the Pacific last week was a disappointment to the men who served on her, and to the people of Nevada, who offered to put up the money to preserve the ship as a historic museum at Annapolis . . . The Nevada, the oldest battleship in the Navy, fought at Scapa Flow, was sunk at Pearl Harbor and then came back to participate in the invasions of France, Iwo Jima and Okinawa. Crewmen refused to take any final souvenirs, "because they'll never sink her."

Only one man on the Nevada was wounded during the Normandy invasion. He was assigned to stay close to some Army personnel aboard as observers. He followed his orders literally and when the Army men went ashore he stayed with them. The sailor later received the Purple Heart, because he was hit by shrapnel —60 miles inland . . . Captain Rhea, a skipper of the Nevada, once told me how he had kept his men's morale high during battle by using a loudspeaker below decks to give the men there a running account of their accomplishments. "Men," he boomed, like a rubberneck barker, during the Mediterranean invasion, "you have just hit and destroyed the Chateau d'If, the dungeon from which Edmond Dantes escaped to become the Count of Monte Cristo. This, you probably all know, was in the novel by Dumas."

The Nevada fired the first shot in the Normandy invasion, then anchored there for 80 hours and survived the bombing and shelling. The ship's paymaster, after two full days at battle-station, finally sagged and collapsed from over exhaustion. The Nazis' coastal guns didn't stir him, nor did the bombs around him. But he leaped to attention when Captain Rhea and Executive Officer Jaeger sang into his ears the reminder: "Happy Birthday To You."

In his forthcoming book, "Of Flight and Life," Charles A. Lindbergh will defend his prewar isolationism and his plea for a negotiated peace between the Allies and Hitler . . . In Westport where the new Spewack play, "Perfect Pitch," is being tried out, Playwright Phil Barry's son is working as stage-manager and playwright. S. N. Behrman's stepson is assistant stage-manager . . . Friends of Robert Morley, the British star who is en route here, are sending word to New York actors not to pay any attention to Morley's horse tips. When his horses lose, as they always do, Morley shrugs: "Oh, well, Frankly, I go to the track for the fresh air, the exercise and the hope of being observed."

Robert Weitman, manager of the New York Paramount Theater, is the man who discovered Frank Sinatra. He heard Sinatra sing, and decided to book him as a featured singer with the Benny Goodman orchestra which was to open at the Paramount the next week. He approached Goodman, and suggested the idea. "To sing with my band?" Goodman scoffed. "What's his name?" . . . "Frank Sinatra," said Weitman . . . Goodman raised his baton, led his orchestra in "Gertie The Riveter," croaked the lyrics, and turned to Weitman: "See? I do all the singing myself. Who needs Sinatra?"

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Bird Feeding

Summer, winter, spring and fall, the family can have a lot of fun and learn something, too, from bird-feeding stations.

The simplest, perhaps, is the tray just outside the window. A bowl of water, bread crumbs, a piece of suet in the winter, some fruit, a bit of grain—all of these will attract one or another kind of bird.

If one lives in the suburbs or the open country, a hedge near the house will serve as a center for feeding. Some people, too, deliberately leave a few piles of brush through the winter so that birds may have protection against the snow.

One must be sure to protect the feeding station against cats by seeing that it is out of their reach. If a feeding station is put on top of a post, the tray should be wide enough so that the cat cannot get up on it. Or one may encircle the post with a protective tin collar.

Photographs may be taken easily after birds become accustomed to the feeding station. Children may keep records of unusual bird visitors. And, if there is a radio expert in the family, a small outdoor microphone may bring into the house the songs and calls of feeding birds.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Probe of Files Suggested

By Drew Pearson

Here is some more summer reading for Congressman J. Parnell Thomas, head of the Un-American Activities Committee.

Incidentally, when Congressmen stage an investigation they usually base it on seizure of the files of a Government agency, a private individual, or a corporation. Some of them seem to feel that they should also keep their own political affairs in such condition that they can afford the white light of public scrutiny.

Rep. Thomas

It might be healthy, therefore, if the public occasionally had a chance to reverse the process and subpena the files of a Congressman, who, after all, is elected by the people and whose conduct should be constantly answerable to the people.

Believing that a Congressman who specializes in investigation should be able to stand up under investigation, this column has done some probing into the political operations of Congressman Thomas, and discovered, as published earlier this week, that for four years he had a young lady on his payroll who kicked back all of her salary, that he also had a cleaning lady enrolled as a clerk who kicked back her salary, that he put his wife's aged aunt on the taxpayers' payroll until he could force New Jersey authorities to put her on relief, following which his daughter-in-law stepped up to the gravy bowl.

Every Congressman is given an allowance to employ competent people to help his constituents at home. They are paid by the United States Treasury, not by him, and are not supposed to be pensioners. However, that is only part of the Thomas story. Here is some more.

Watching Rep. Thomas

The Congressman from New Jersey has not been above using his committee for other "un-American activities." During the war, for instance, Pvt. Edward Allen Kimmel of Long Beach, N. Y., serial No. 32801902, was fearful of being shipped overseas to a battlefront.

So, believe it or not, the Congressman from New Jersey telephoned the Second Service Command in New York and informed them that young Kimmel was an undercover agent for the Un-American Activities Committee, therefore had to be kept close to the New York area. Thomas at that time was also a member of the House Military Affairs Committee, so naturally his words carried weight with the Army.

Accordingly, Col. C. E. Miller, director of personnel for the Second Service Command, had Kimmel transferred from Camp Upton and assigned as an investigator of the Internal Security Division in New York.

Before Kimmel took over his new duties, however, Colonel Miller asked the soldier to drop in to see him, and much to his surprise learned that he was only 18 years old, and that the only experience he had prior to entering the Army was a student at New York University. He had had no experience as an investigator.

Outbluffing Army

Skeptical, Colonel Miller telephoned the Congressman's office to report that Kimmel said he had never met Thomas and had never worked for the Un-American Activities Committee. The colonel suggested that perhaps the Army had the wrong Kimmel.

This broad hint did not faze the Congressman from New Jersey. Brazenly he sent Ray Rockefeller, investigator for the Un-American Activities Committee, to Colonel Miller's office on an Un-American errand. There he insisted that Kimmel's ignorance was feigned and that it proved what a good undercover operator the boy was.

"You couldn't get anything out of him, could you?," bluffed Mr. Thomas' emissary. "That just shows how valuable this man is."

Colonel Miller remained skeptical. He retained Kimmel in Internal Security only 18 days. But he did not transfer him overseas. Kimmel was assigned to the Broadway Central Hotel in New York, a temporary Army barracks, where he spent considerable time while his buddies fought it out overseas. Later he was transferred to Camp Blanding, Fla. At no time did he go anywhere near a battle front.

Shortly after performing this favor for the Kimmel family, Congressman Thomas attempted to cash in on it.

Thomas Cashes In

On September 23, 1943, a few months after intervening for Kimmel, Thomas sent a letter to the boy's father, Herman Kimmel of Kimmel & Hertling, 318 East 32d st., New York. In addition to his congressional duties, Representative Thomas runs an insurance firm—Thomas & Godfrey—and the letter was for the obvious purpose of getting insurance from the father of the boy he had helped. The letter read:

"This will introduce my partner, Spencer K. Godfrey. As you know, Godfrey and I some time ago formed the insurance brokerage firm of Thomas & Godfrey, since which time we have served some of the largest and most reputable concerns, and we have never resorted to the 'Jimmy Roosevelt practice' either. I know that Godfrey can be helpful to you; at least I would appreciate any courtesies which you may care to extend to him."

Thomas' high blood pressure must have gone up a bit when the letter came back from his insurance partner. Across the bottom was scribbled:

"This man refused to talk—said he doesn't know you."

Probably Herman Kimmel was only pulling an act similar to that of his son when quizzed by the Army colonel. For, a year later, when Thomas was up for reelection, Kimmel sent a helpful contribution of $250 to the Congressman's campaign. And two years later, in the 1946 primary, Kimmel also sweetened the campaign kitty to the tune of $100.

So the "American act" of keeping a man from overseas duty paid dividends in the end.

Exports to Russia

Inside fact is that Senator Ferguson stumbled onto William Remington, the alleged Communist in the Commerce Department, when he started investigating whether the United States was still shipping strategic goods to Russia and her satellites.

George Meredith of the Senate Small Business Committee had turned over to Ferguson certain information showing that strategic materials to Russia were being OK'd in the Commerce Department.

Here are some of the exports which have been shipped: a steel mill, built in this country and sent in sections to Russia; 70 jeeps sent to Poland; several tons of needles good for scrap metal, shipped to Czechoslovakia; a high-speed aerial camera, also sent to Czechoslovakia; an automobile, consigned to the head of the Soviet-sponsored broadcasting company in Romania; locomotives to Finland,, coal-mining machinery to Poland, and raw cotton to Czechoslovakia and Poland.

While these goods were not great in quantity, interesting fact is that their export was first turned down by the licensing officers, but later approved over their heads, not by Remington, but by H. W. Parisius, until recently chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Toastmaster

He is the banquet boss whose job . . . Is not an easy one . . . Because he has to guide the course . . . Of business and of fun . . . He introduces speakers in . . . A pleasant sort of way . . . And gives a hint or two of what . . . They are about to say . . . He calls attention to the guests . . . And tells a joke or two . . . And he must have a parting word . . . When all the rest are through . . . Sometimes this kind of creature knows . . . Precisely when to pause . . . And how to hold the audience . . . And draw the most applause . . . But sometimes he is not so hot . . . Or does not know the score . . . And by his smart or clumsy style . . . Turns out to be a bore.
